National Holstein Winter Forums Scheduled

FREDERICK, MD—A national network of winter meetings coast-to-coast is set for all Holstein breeders. Known as the Holstein Winter Forum, the National Holstein Association each year holds grass roots meetings to obtain opinions from breeders on all areas of interest to the dairy industry.

"Now more than ever, the National Holstein Asociation is seeking input from the breeders on the key issues facing the dairy industry and the association," said Marlin Hoff, director from Maryland. "Come to the meeting nearest you and add your voice to those of your neighbors at the breed meetings. National directors from your region will carry your message to the association leadership," Hoff said.

Some of the topics for discussion include the new classification options, finances, genetic issues,

State Farm Show participation is in full swing for Amos and Patricia Good with sons, from left, Justin, 18; Christopher, 10; Patrick, 14; and Jonathan, 7. Justin has been showing hogs for four years, but it will be the first time at state competition for Patrick, who is autistic and a member of the 4-H swine club.

Farm Show Provides Opportunity For Autistic Teen To Participate

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — New faces enter the Pennsylvania Farm Show livestock competition every year. This year, Patrick Good will be one of those new faces when he shows his pigs in competition.

Patrick is autistic.

No two cases of autism are precisely alike. For Patrick, who is at a higher functioning level than many youngsters with autism, it means he is limited in his ability to understand and speak.

Patrick was born 14 years ago, when little was known about autism. This rare condition affects approximately 1 out of every 2,000 children. It is four times more common in boys than in girls and is found throughout the world in diverse ethnic, racial, and social backgrounds.

Patrick's parents, Patricia and Amos, said that some form of mental disability was suspected by the time Patrick was two years old, but it wasn't until he was six that he was diagnosed as being autistic.

The diagnosis is often difficult to make because a whole spectrum of symptoms is possible. For Patrick, the diagnosis was made from an array of behaviors of which object fixation was one. For example, when Patrick was two years old, he would spend hours watching the windmill at his grandparents' home go round and round and he continues to spend hours twiddling with rubber bands.

Unlike many autistic children who avoid physical contact with others and rarely make eye contact, Patrick, from the beginning, was affectionate and often crawled into his dad's lap and curled up to sleep.

His large motor skills such as crawling and walking developed normally but language skills seemed almost nonexistant for many years as Patrick depended on grunts and pointing to have his family understand him.

His mother, a nurse, searched for ways to help Patrick who needed in-depth language stimulation to help him speak.

Therapists stressed the importance of the parents expecting Patrick to verbalize his wants. When Patrick pointed to a glass and grunted, the parents repeated, "Water. Do you want a glass of water?"

1994 Farm Products Show Bigger, Better, Busier

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 1994 state Farm Show, Pennsylvania's 78th exposition and agricultural fair held at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, is set to open to the public 8 a.m. Saturday with the judging of draft horses, followed at 9:30 a.m. with the naming of the supreme champion swine.

By that time, hundreds of exhibitors will have had less sleep, and caught catnaps, sleeping on blankets on hay bales near their show animals' stalls.

Others take up residence in motels and hotels. Some make a daily drive and get support from friends or hire extra help to do milkings and feedings.

There is the washing area, with its water mist almost ever-present. Wheelbarrels of manure and hay being taken to a storage area.

Crowds of people with candy cones, pretzels, baked potatoes. Young and old.

New York & Phila. Frozen Egg Report

Tuesday, January 4, 1994

The market tone was unsettled as traders watched for post holiday adjustments. Buying activity was usually limited to fill-in needs. Raw materials were readily available and easily satisfied production schedules. Floor stocks were in good balance to cover current dealers needs.' A major snow storm was affecting production schedules and deliveries throughout the area.

Trucklot buying interest was somewhat slower today than early week, but about as expected. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts were adequate to cover regular commitments but short of covering buyer inquiries for additional product for immediate needs. Most trading was at 1.80 but a little buyer resistance was noted in some quarters. Line run breasts were in close balance to tight with some buyer inquiries not covered. Prices trended higher and the undertone was fully steady. Dark meat items were well cleared with a fully steady undertone on some items. Yellow wings continued tight, white wings were showing.

Prices were lower for the large sizes, and unchanged for mediums. Trade sentiment was weak on the large sizes, and barely steady for mediums. Demand was irregular, and covered the full range. Yesterday's winter storm interrupted deliveries in some locations and some distributors found floor stocks tight, but overall, supplies of the large sizes were at least adequate, and mediums were adequate.

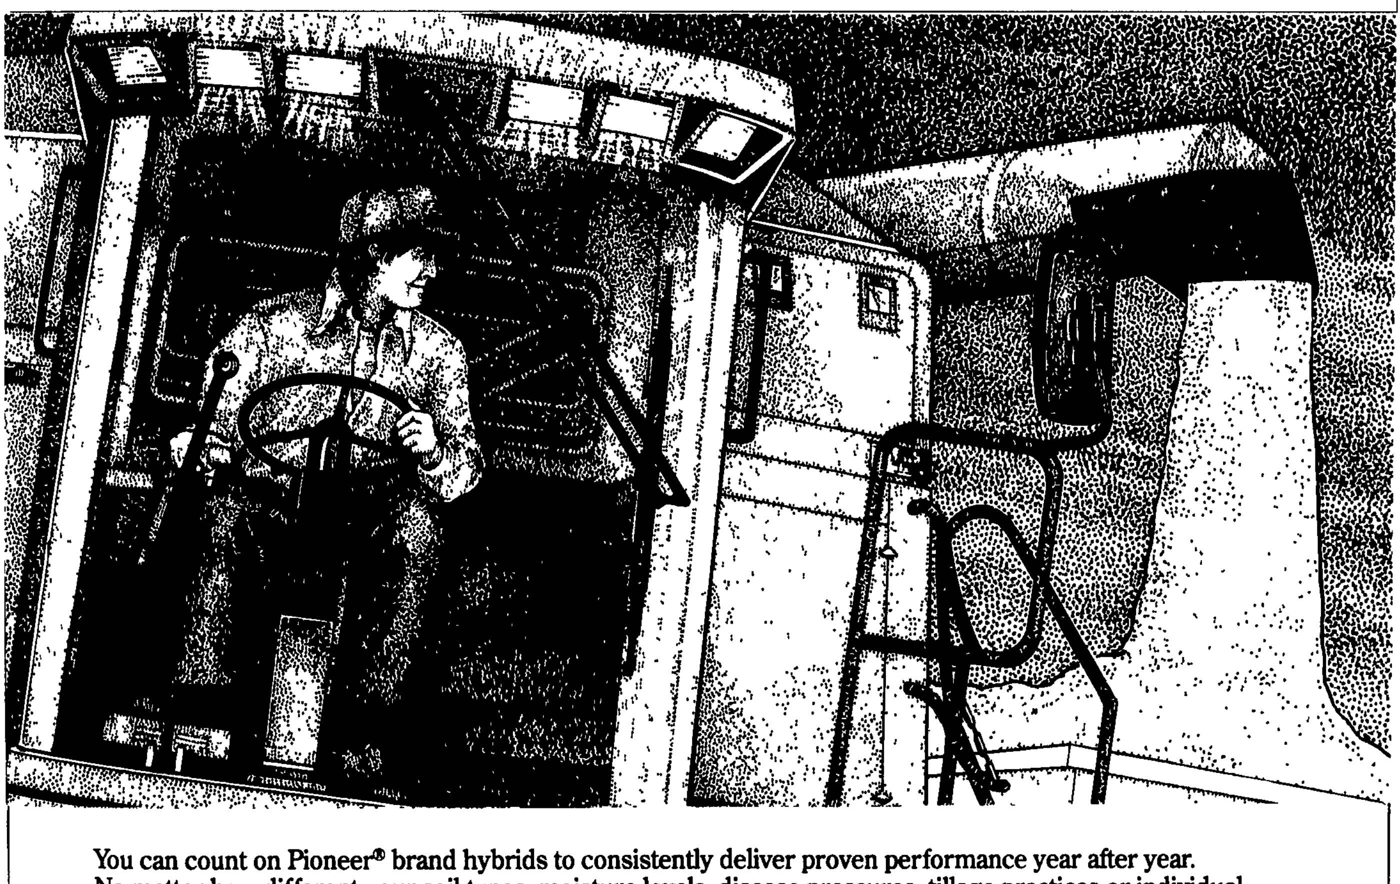
COUNT ON IT.



You can count on Pioneer® brand hybrids to consistently deliver proven performance year after year. No matter how different your soil types, moisture levels, disease pressures, tillage practices or individual management goals. We'll help you find the hybrids that best fit your needs. And we'll help you make the most out of the corn acres you plant. So ask your Pioneer sales representative today for the numbers that count.

Top-end yield potential. Exceptional early growth. This hybrid features outstanding stalks, superior staygreen and very good drought tolerance. Above average grain appearance and grain protein content.

Record setting yields and exceptional agronomics. This exciting hybrid combines traits corn growers want: impressive early growth, strong stalks and roots, exceptional stress tolerance, above average drydown and lengthy staygreen. Widely adapted to varying soil types, tillage methods and populations.

The performance leader in this maturity. 3525 is a widely adapted, stable, high-yielding hybrid. Tall plant type, excellent for grain and silage. Late flowering will limit northward movement. Good ear flex and ear attachment. Strong performer under stress.

Comparative Relative Maturity (CRM)

With no industry standard for maturity ratings, comparing maturities between companies is usually difficult. Use this rating to compare Pioneer hybrids with competitive hybrids of similar maturity and harvest moisture. These ratings are based on customer side-by-side and research comparison experience. Individual company ratings may still show a variation from the average comparative rating.

THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JANUARY 10-16, 1994

PLOUGH MONDAY, JAN. 10.

PLOUGH MONDAY

Plough Monday (the first Monday after Epiphany) was the traditional day for menfolk to return to work after the holidays, although no work was actually done that day! Dressed in clean white smocks decorated with ribbons, the men dragged a plough through the village and collected money, originally for the "plough-light" kept burning in the church all year. Often, men from several farms would join together to pull the plough through all their villages. The merry men sang and danced their way from village to village to the accompaniment of musicians. In the evening, each farmer gave a Plough Monday Supper for his men, with plentiful beef and ale for all.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ When the plastic tip of shoe laces breaks, wrap the end tightly with transparent tape or dip in clear nail polish.

EARWISE

Motor oil never really wears out — it just gets dirty, picking up toxic sludge from your car's engine. Although used oil can be re-refined and rendered as good as new, Americans throw away more than 120 million gallons of dirty oil every year To find out where to recycle oil locally, call the EPA at 202-382-7932; or to set up your own recycling program, contact Project ROSE (Recycled Oil Saves Energy), P.O Box 870203, Tuscaloosa, AL 35487-0203.

Plan To Come To The Farm Show Too

Pennsylvania farmers are to be congratulated. Their numbers are small when you make comparison to the total population. But like a mighty economic army, they influence the life of every person in the Keystone State — good food on the family dinner table, for example.

But just as important is the impact on society when 20 percent of the jobs in Pennsylvania have some foundation in agriculture's production, transportation, processing, marketing and the suppliers of products and services for these direct farm businesses.

According to the latest figures (1992) from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the cash receipts from marketing farm products reached $3.64 billion. That's a three percent increase over the previous year. Ag exports totaled $348.7 million. Pennsylvania is fifth in the nation for dairy products exported; eighth for poultry products and ninth for prepared fruits.

No wonder farming continues to be the number one industry in Pennsylvania.

And now it's time again to honor these farmers and agribusinesses who keep Pennsylvania strong. The Pennsylvania Farm Show opens this weekend in Harrisburg. As a showcase for our industry, this yearly New Years' event can't be beat. And as an educational tool for both farmers and consumers, the Farm Show has been instrumental in keeping everyone abreast of the advances made in agriculture.

For suppliers of equipment and services, the Farm Show gives agribusinesses the opportunity to develop markets. And farmers can find a variety of products in one building and see what's new and make comparisons of equipment that may need to be purchased in the coming year.

State Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff says the Farm Show has helped our farm community to develop new markets and boost sales of livestock, crops and related products. In addition, the Farm Show helps establish new standards of quality for Pennsylvania agriculture that are the foundations of its international reputation.

"We are proud of the efficiency and productivity of Pennsylvania farmers and agricusinesses who keep agriculture the number one industry of Pennsylvania," Wolff said.

Everyone in Pennsylvania can find something of interest at the Farm Show. We hope you plan to come to the Farm Show too.

To Attend Farm Show

January 8 marks the opening of the 78th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

The show is open every day from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. except Sunday, when the hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Thursday when the hours are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. The show closes on Thursday, January 13.

Be sure to stop by the Penn State booth in the main exhibit building. This year's theme is water quality and nutrient management. The booth will feature information on underground water, water testing, and the new nutrient management law. Other attractions include the butter sculpture, animal shows, sheep to shawl contest, commercial exhibits, educational demonstrations and exhibits, baby animal learning center, folk dance festival, and the famous food court.

Read this issue of Lancaster Farming for more details on these and other events at the Farm Show.

To Form Agricultural Security Districts

More than 10 years ago, the Pennsylvania legislature passed the Agricultural Security Act.

This allowed farmers in a township to form agricultural security districts. These districts entitle the participating landowners to special consideration from the local governing body and state government agencies.

The local government unit may not impose ordinances that unreasonably restrict farm structures or practices within the ag security area, nor may normal farming operations and practices be deemed nuisances in a nuisance ordinance.

State government agencies must modify their administrative regulations and procedures to encourage viable farming in agricultural security areas. To form an agricultural security area, the farmers must petition their local government unit and must have at least 500 acres of land.

For more details on the Agricultural Security Area Program, contact your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

To Realize The Value Of 1 Cent

Today I was reading an article on how custom feed formulation by laying hen strain reduced the cost of producing eggs by one half cent a dozen.

My initial reaction was a half a cent is not very much money until I did some simple math. Based on 22 dozen of eggs produced per hen housed, a half a cent equals 11 cents per bird. That figures to $11,000 for every 100,000 layers you have.

Based on information from several egg marketing companies, the difference farmers receive for egg prices may be as high as 5 cents a dozen or $110,000 on a 100,000-bird flock.

The same is true for dairy, swine, fruit farms, etc. Pennies do add up to big dollars on our farms.

Now is the time to look for ways to reduce costs by a few pennies or increase the price you receive by producing high quality products. This means fewer dirty and cracked eggs, lower somatic cell counts, reduced feed waste, or better feed conversions.

Work with your service people and spend the time to chase pennies and turn them into big dollars.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "A penny saved is a penny earned."

THE QUESTION OF GOD'S WILL

January 9, 1994

Background Scripture:
Luke 4:31-43
Devotional Reading:
Mark 6:1-6a; 9:1-8

You don't hear this so much any more, but when I was younger, whenever affliction or tragedy struck someone, there were always those who would be quick to proclaim: "it is God's will." Many Christians still seem to equate human suffering with the will of God.

It is interesting to note that, according to the gospels, this is quite contrary to the view which Jesus held. Nowhere in the four gospels is there even any suggestion that He shared this idea. In fact, if you note His response to people who came to Him for healing, you'll find that He operates under the assumption that illness and possession are quite contrary to the will of God.

In Luke 4:33-37, when Jesus encounters in the synagogue "the man who had the spirit of an unclean demon," He does not question whether it is God's will for the man to be possessed; He commands the demon to come out of the man and he does. Note, too, that Jesus does not greet the demon as one who is doing the will of God, but as one who is thwarting that will. "Jesus rebuked him, saying, 'Be silent, and come out of him.'" (4:35). That is not a greeting to a colleague, but an enemy.

REBUKING THE FEVER

Note also that when Jesus went to Capernaum and the house of Simon Peter and found that the disciple's mother was ill with a high fever. He did not stop to discern whether perhaps God wanted her to be ill. Nor did He assume that God sent her this illness so that she might grow spiritually. Neither did He for one minute seek to discern if she was worthy of being healed. He does not greet this fever as a friend or ally with God, but Luke says: "And He stood over her and rebuked the fever, and it left her;" (4:30). He rebuked the fever — is that any way to treat a friend?

In all other healing incidents in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, Jesus assumes that it is God's will for these people to be whole. He never prays, asking God to heal someone if it is your will." (He actually only prayed that prayer once and it was in the Garden of Gethsemane and had nothing to do with healing, but with his own crucifixion.)

GOD'S WILL

So, I have never hesitated to pray for God to heal someone, for I believe with all my heart and mind that God's will for us is wholeness. When I pray thus I do not pray so that He will do my will, but that I may join myself with His — to make us whole. Neither, do I believe that God sends us disease to punish us or to make us grow spiritually. True, when we are ill, there is often an opportunity for spiritual growth, but that doesn't mean that God afflicts us so that we may grow.

If God wills wholeness, why are so many of us ill? Let's look at it from another angle. I also believe it is God's will for me to be a righteous person. But I am not telling you any secret when I admit that I am something less than that. Why? Is it not God's will for me to be kind, loving and compassionate? Yes, it is. God wills me to be this way, but He does not compel me to comply. In the same way, I believe He wills me to be whole, but doesn't compel me to be whole. I have free will, the power to make many choices that impinge upon my health. Others, by their own free will, may affect my health. Germs, viruses, carcinogens, exercising a kind of natural freedom, can significantly affect my health. God wills for us a healthy, wholesome environment, but He does not compel us to have one. So, our illness, our lack of wholeness, is part of the price we pay for our freedom.

Jesus knew that illness was against God's will and He spent much of His time ministering to people's physical and mental well-being. Furthermore, He knew that He had the authority to rebuke these illnesses and heal them. Even the demons knew that!

Do we?

"Farming is a big investment...

Time is valuable. An equipment breakdown in the field, delayed supplies, or sudden weather changes mean lost dollars, without quick reaction. Our GE mobile radio system gives us greater control and coordination over our operation. It's a farmer's friend."

Roger C. Garber
James M. Garber & Sons

Why are farmers turning to mobile radio? During planting and harvesting your farm and equipment need to be operating at full potential. General Electric Mobile Radio Systems provide quick, cost effective communications from home or field. It's like having another "farm hand" to help with the chores.

Dreamfield Manor 960 Acre Country Estate

Just 35 Miles from Philadelphia

A rare opportunity to own a beautiful private valley. This one of a kind farm features a traditional English Manor entryway to the main set of buildings passing between the gate house and stone bank barn and over 2 stone bridges to an exquisite stone manor house circa 1703, with 6 bedrooms & 3 huge stone fireplaces. There is also a large Federal brick manor house. In total there are eight farm houses, four of which are stone, and two large stone bank barns. The land consists of gently rolling fields, woodland, and a beautiful stream valley. This farm has excellent potential for equestrian activities such as fox hunting or combined training. Secluded yet close to a PA Turnpike interchange and Interstate 78. (the owner may consider dividing) $6.5 Million

Nutrient Management Information At Farm Show

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Many of Pennsylvania's livestock producers will be affected by the state's Nutrient Management Act, which requires operations that generate or use large amounts of animal manure to implement nutrient management plans.

To learn more about the nutrient management legislation, visit the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences exhibit at the 78th Pennsylvania State Farm Show at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, Jan. 8-13.

The display will contain information on farm nutrient cycles, manure management, manure spreader calibration, crop diversity and rotation, keeping farm nutrient management records and complying with regulations. Penn State researchers and extension agents will be on hand to discuss nutrient management and the new legislation.

The Nutrient Management Act was passed in July, and State Conservation Commission regulations based on the act will be issued within the next two years. Under the act, animal operations that exceed an annual average of two animal-equivalent units per acre are considered concentrated animal operations and must develop nutrient management plans.

"Farmers should determine now whether their facilities will need to comply with the act's requirements," said Dr. Douglas Beegle, associate professor of agronomy. "Once the regulations are effective, existing farm operations will have one year to develop nutrient management plans. New or expanded operations must develop a plan within three months after the facility starts operating."

A nutrient management specialist must certify that the plan was prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Nutrient Management Act. Plans are subject to approval by county legislation, the local conservation district, or the State Conservation Commission. Unless they can be shown to require substantial capital improvements, approved plans must be fully implemented within three years.

The 1994 Farm Show will open to the public on Saturday, Jan. 8, and will close on Thursday, Jan. 13. Hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday; and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday.

National Conference Examines Future Of CRP

ANKENY, Iowa — Whether Congress and the Clinton Administration are willing to extend the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) and in what form will be discussed at a national conference, Feb. 10-11, in Arlington, Va.

"When Conservation Reserve Program Contracts Expire — The Policy Options" is being sponsored by the Soil and Water Conservation Society (SWCS) in cooperation with several federal government agencies and about 40 environmental and agricultural organizations. The conference will be held at the Renaissance Hotel in Arlington.

Among the invited speakers for the conference are Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy; Senator Patrick Leahy, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee; Congressman Glenn English, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee's Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development; and Paul Johnson, the chief-designate of the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service.

Results from a new national Survey of CRP contract holders will also be presented at the conference. The survey is designed to determine how CRP participants plan to use their acres following contract expiration and what incentives they might accept for keeping some or all of their acres out of crop production for longer periods of time.

Under the CRP, the federal government pays farmers an annual rental fee for retiring highly erodible and other environmentally fragile land from crop production for a period of 10 or more years. In return, farmers must establish and maintain a permanent soil-conserving cover of grass or trees on the retired acres for the life of the contract.

About 36.5 million acres are enrolled in the CRP. The earliest CRP contracts will start to expire in 1995.

No decisions have been made yet on whether farmers participating in the CRP will be offered contract extensions or other incentives to keep their land out of crop production and thus protect the environmental benefits gained under the program.

Information about the conference can be obtained by writing or calling SWCS, 7515 Northeast Ankeny Road, Ankeny, Iowa 50021-9764, (515) 289-2331 or 1-800-THE SOIL.

Open House Draws 200 Farmers In Snow Storm

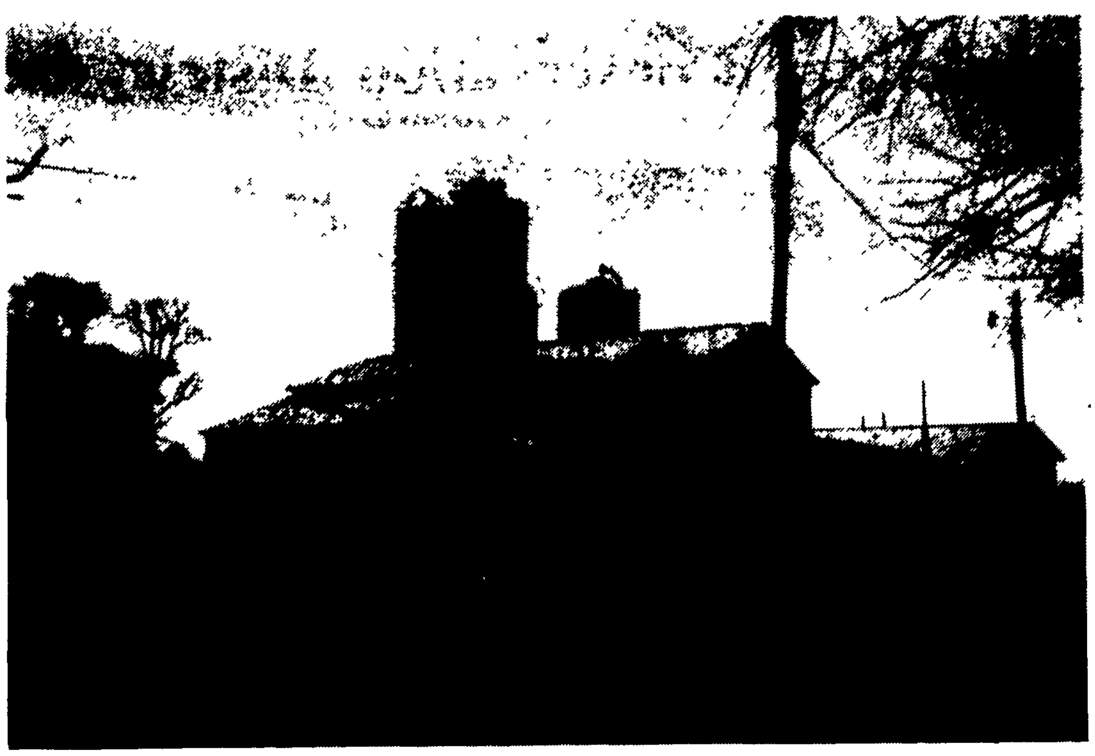
ANNVILLE, (Lebanon County)—The big snow storm this week stopped many activities but not the open house on the farm of Tom and Lucille Shuey. Their new 38' x 97' dairy barn and new holding area, maternity pens and a new milk house and parlor was the focus of the supplier/manufacturer event. A fire of suspicious origin Feb. 1 destroyed the old barn. The new facility was built to house their 180 Holstein dairy cows and young stock.

When the snow story hit the area, many farmers called to ask if the open house was cancelled. But the food was ready.

"We really got a lot of calls," Mrs. Shuey said. "We told them they could come, and everyone said they were on their way. In the end we had 200 people or better."

Sponsors of the open house included Hostetter Surge, Kipe Steel, Inc., E. A. Brensinger, Rufus Brubaker Refrigeration, RiGiDP-LY Rafters, Penn Jersey Products, Inc., David W. Hahnlen Electrical Contractor, Lash Plumbing & Heating, Inc., and E. R. Shamber Welding.

"It was lucky my husband woke up," Mrs. Shuey said. The fire seemed to start in the hay mow. We lost a lot in the fire, but we feel a little better now that we have the nice new buildings.



These buildings were constructed after a fire destroyed the barn on the farm of Tom and Lucille Shuey. Two-hundred farmers braved the snow storm Tuesday for an open house to see the new facilities.

Lancaster Conservation District Reviews Year At Meeting

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster Conservation District implemented Chesapeake Bay projects worth a total of $344,000 over the course of one year to cooperating farmers, according to Gerald Heistand, bay technician.

Heistand spoke to about 30 agency and industry representatives at the Lancaster County Conservation District meeting at the Stock Yard Inn on Wednesday night.

The district is beginning to implement the new Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources stream bank fencing program, which is 100 percent cost-shared for farmers in the Chesapeake Bay drainage area.

The district also reviewed various projects and plans implemented during the course of the year, with input from various cooperating agencies.

A total of 9,400 acres have been placed in conservation plans, according to Warren Archibald, district conservationist, Soil Conservation Service. About 18 new contracts were implemented in 1993, bringing the total under contract to about 170. In addition, 25 new manure storage structures were installed in 1993, with 15 still in the planning stages.

Archibald said that there is renewed interest by farmers in several experimental rotational grazing projects under way in the county. Also, interest in conservation tillage is picking up.

In the month of December alone, the conservation district signed on six new cooperators, for a total of 223 acres in conservation plans.

Also, new directors were elected at the meeting. They are James E. Huber, county commissioner, Lancaster; Robert B. Lauffer, Garden Spot High School agriscience teacher, Narvon; and Herbert N. Myer, Lampeter.

Scheduled meetings for 1994 include the District Legislative Breakfast, scheduled May 6 at Kreider's Restaurant, Manheim, from 7:30 a.m.-9 a.m. Also, the district banquet is set March 24 at Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland, at 7 p.m.

REAL BEEF - BETTER THAN EVER.™

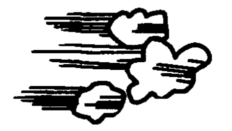
tendrleen CERTIFIED BEEF®

Available exclusively from: pennfield feeds

Would you like to raise beef cattle in existing facilities?

Dairy beef cattle perform well when you avoid extremes in temperature and moisture. A little planning and $300-$1,200 can turn many existing facilities into a protected, dry pen:
Maximum weight gain and minimal labor are the result.

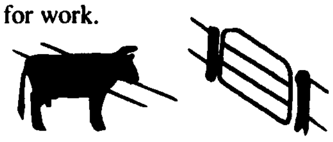
Find a well drained location which lets steers find dry ground in any weather. An unheated, 3-sided machine shed or barn stalls converted to a pen are ideal.



Keep the draft off by covering any large holes with sheet metal or plywood. Allow steers to move freely with a double-wide outside entrance.

Give them 25-30 sq. ft. per head including water source and bulk feeder (if used). Best choice is feed and water close to shed/barn to encourage "all-weather eating."

Let steers eat with wide enough feeder or bunks. Their only job is to eat—don't make it hard for animals to punch in for work.



Make gate handy for truck access: Come marketing time, you'll be glad you did. With multiple pens, give each its own gate.

Raising a small group from bull calves shouldn't be a major effort—and that includes fixing up your facility.

Certified Beef™ is a low-investment, high-gain program to take cattle to market weight in 12 months. The Tend-R-Leen beef meets growing consumer demand for less fat, better value and great flavor. This no-roughage program converts $2.00 corn to $6.00 corn in existing facilities with minimal labor.

Foundation Meeting Set

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Two Lancaster Farm and Home Foundation scholarship winners will be talking about their experiences since receiving the recognition at the foundation's annual dinner meeting.

The dinner meeting, celebrating 30 years of the foundation, is scheduled Tuesday, Jan. 18 at 6:30 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

1994 Farm Products Show Bigger, Better, Busier

Older people doing the same thing, just a little slower, and not quite as loudly.

But the show is almost always in some stage of development, as some commercial and agricultural commodity exhibitors spend years in advance planning to attend the largest free indoor agricultural expo in the nation.

And state officials, such as Victoria Ritter, Farm Show director, never really stop working from opening day to opening day.

In fact, the behind-the-scenes activity is full. Since presstime Thursday, at least one judge was to have been already making final decisions and placing ribbons — Randy Sprague, of Portville, N.Y., was to have judged the maple syrup products display.

Today is also full with judging of poultry, swine, Christmas trees, horticultural commodities, grains, and vegetables.

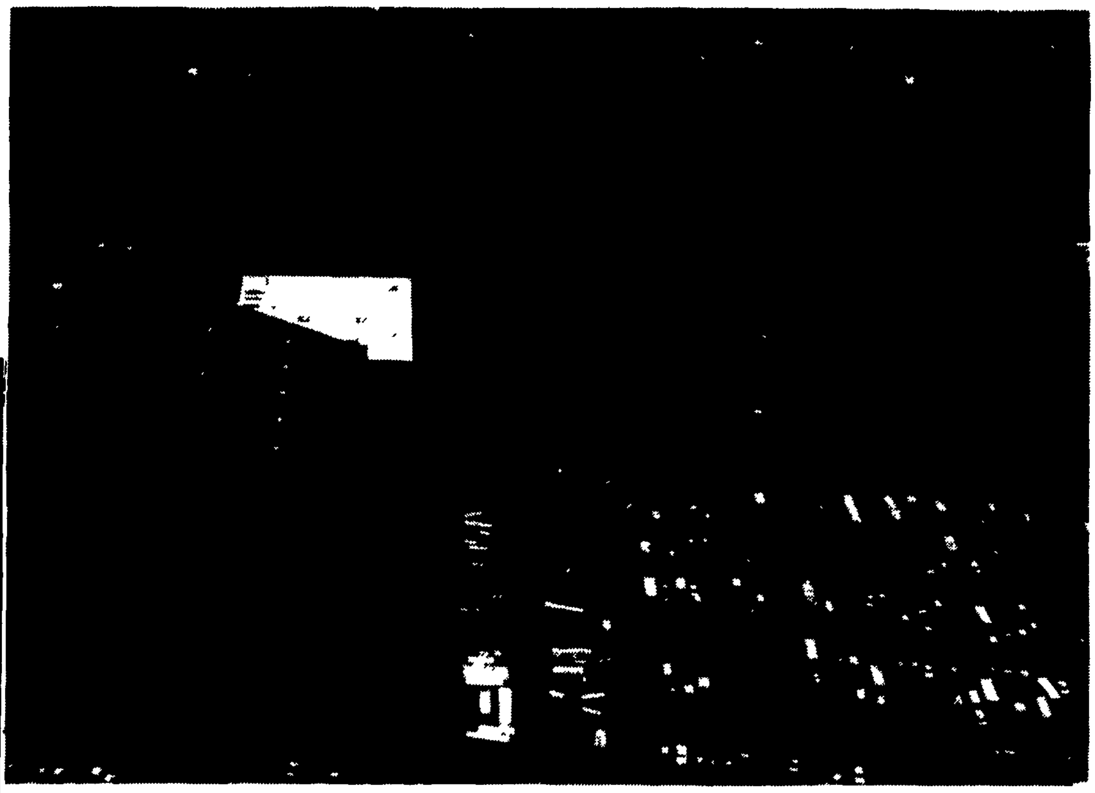
And leading up to this coming week, for several weeks farm families around the state have been selecting animals, brushing, caring, washing, grooming, walking them and getting them used to constant attention and other people, in preparation for one of the highlights of the year.

Some commercial exhibitors, especially those with large, bulky equipment, started bringing their wares into the 622,000-square foot Farm Show Complex before Christmas, in order to set up the displays quickly and efficiently.

Every year there seems to be something new at the Farm Show, and while there aren't perhaps as many noticeable changes as in recent years (such as new roofs, lighting, new additions, etc.), there is always something new at the Farm Show.

The walls of the Large Arena were painted for the first time last year and this year the walls of the Main Exhibit Hall were painted. In fact, Ritter said that of the 500 doors to the huge Farm Show Complex, about 340 are already painted.

(Turn to Page A27)



A view of the Farm Show Complex from the air gives an idea of the immensity of the 1994 Farm Show show that is to take place this week under its roof. The building has undergone rennovations in recent years and continues to be upgraded as state funds become available.

William Lelick, spokesman with the state Department of Agriculture press office, said he is recommending to friends and family, "Plan on spending the entire day or at least an evening to take in the sights. And if you've been there before, make sure to get to the second floor of the new Northeast Building, where the Family Corner is located, because of a number of new demonstrations being held."

On Tuesday this week, Lelik said he was looking foward to visiting the Family Corner area to see displays of various nut trees by the Pennsylvania Nut Growers Association; and to see a 9 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 12, demonstration by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Canine Inspection Team.

The USDA canine inspection demonstrations are to show the abilities of dogs to detect materials subject to USDA customs restrictions.

Many of the pests which threaten the state's horticultural, silvicutural and other agricultural industries were either introduced through wayward experimentation, or brought into country in the luggage of someone indifferent or ignorant to the risk it poses to large industries.

Also scheduled for the area are a story teller and some instruction on making scarecrows.

There's also a new "Trade Concourse" in the vicinity, which Lelik said is new and consumer oriented. There are to be 12 display booths from a variety of Pennsylvania agribusinesses, including Furman Foods, Herr Foods, Hatfield Quality Meats, Cloister Spring Water Inc., Seneca-Kennet Foods, Daniel Weaver Co. Meats, Groffs Candies, Pennpak Gift Packs and selections of various foods.

Lelik's work duties require him to gather and disseminate news items to the press, and take photos of some of the events. He said the high school rodeo, which is scheduled for Saturday evening, is one of the more popular events for the general public.

The Pennsylvania FFA is also again holding its annual convention at the Farm Show. It starts Monday at 4 p.m.

Over the years, getting to the Farm Show has ranged in degree of difficulty, but this year travelers can expect a smoother trip.

Farm Show traffic has traditionally been congested. Those familiar with Cameron and Maclay streets during Farm Show week are also familiar with long lines and backed-up traffic.

Visitors should notice improvements to traffic flow due to lane expansions along Cameron Street, and a new traffic signal installed at the entrance to the Farm Show public parking lot — the roadway was redesigned so that through-traffic may continue, instead of being forced to wait for cars to turn against two-lane traffic.

As in previous years, shuttle buses are to be operating from the parking lot of the Harrisburg Area Capital Campus (HACC), located north of the Farm Show parking lot.

And, despite a large number of traffic accidents this past summer along I81 near Harrisburg, those projects have all been finished for the season, with the exception of a stretch near Carlisle.

According to Edward Myslewicz, deputy press secretary for PennDOT, travel to and from Harrisburg, barring any weather-caused problems, can be expected to be good.

He said that Rt. 80 has no scheduled repair projects during the week. However, there is some ongoing construction along Routes 11-15, which courses along the west bank of the Susquehanna through Harrisburg and north to Sunbury.

According to Myslewicz, construction on Rt.s 11-15 is along the stretch near Liverpool, north of Harrisburg. He said the roadway is undergoing a road-widening project and may cause some delays.

But once at the complex, there is a full offering of shows, displays and demonstrations.

Of course, there is a limit set on most of animals shows, based on receipt of applications. As of Tuesday, the final count was still incomplete, but generally there are no stalls left empty.

And the new construction has allowed a little more room for both animals and visitors.

"The new building has been wonderful," Victoria Ritter said. "We can separate all the species. The West Building has swine and sheep, but that works very nicely."

Overall, the final tally of animals entered for this year's farm show, according to Charles Itle, manager, is 183 horses, 589 swine, 782 sheep, 514 beef, 520 dairy cattle, 237 dairy goats, 2,055 poultry entries, and 565 rabbits.

But people associate more than animal enterprise and displaying with the annual Farm Show.

The Food Court, located in the East Building, is always very popular and Ritter said the same 11 commodity booths will be there serving their various Pennsylvania foods, such as trout sandwiches, deep fried mushrooms, apple juices, milk shakes, baked potatoes and fries, vegetable soups, chicken-based and beef-based soups, fried mushrooms, etc.

According to Beverly Gruber, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association, said that group is planning to serve 50,000 items during the week, including pork barbeque and roast beef sandwiches and lamb stew. Last year the group sold 41,800 units, she said.

Of course, the entire complex will be decorated with poinsettias and the Main Exhibit Hall and the livestock buildings all have agribusiness exhibitor booths.

The big, and heavy machinery items are in the Main Exhibit Hall, while services or small supplies are located at various locations throughout. There are also a number of other vendors who sell various goods during the show.

For those with legal questions, or have lost track of a child or companion, the state police are on board all week and are to have a trailer set up in the Main Exhibit Hall, midway against the north wall.

On Tuesday, as a winter storm was dumping snow and freezing rain on the state, Ritter said the snow in the Farm Show parking lot was piling up and that crews were readying to clear the large lot.

Large piles of plowed snow should be still evident during Farm Show Week.

All throughout this issue of Lancaster Farming there are articles, illustrations and schedules about the 1994 Farm Show.

Also, those seeking help can find it at information booths located at various prominent places throughout the complex.

Tree Growers To Honor Family

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) — The John Hommer´Family, originally from Glasgow, Cambria County, will be honored for more than 50 years of work on behalf of the Christmas tree industry in the commonwealth, at the Pennsylvania Christmas Tree Growers Association's (PCTGA) annual meeting January 14, in Carlisle.

The award will be presented by Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff and officers of the grower's association. Mrs. John (Genevieve) Hommer, New Cumberland, will accept the award on behalf of the family.

The Hommer family joined the association in 1954 as one of the first members in the then "infant" association which had been formed a few years before. The Hommer's lumber business in Glasgow, Pa., Cambria County, had already been going strong since 1864 when J.H. Hommer purchased 1,000 acres of timber.

The Hommer Family continued the lumber business throughout several family generations and in 1992 planted their first Christmas trees. The first Christmas trees were sold in 1930. At the peak of their Christmas tree business, the family had 10 farms with more than one million Christmas trees planted.

John Hommer (deceased) was elected to the association's board of directors in 1964 and served two three-year terms on the board. Along with his work for the Pennsylvania Christmas Tree Growers. Hommer served as chairman of the Agricultural Advisory Committee and the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations.

"In the family's early years of growing Christmas trees, they perfected — through trial and error and much diligent work — the art of growing pines and other varieties for Pennsylvania conditions and helped bring the Christmas tree industry to its high standard of quality," according to Melissa Nelson, PCTGA executive secretary.

Throughout the 1950s to the present, the family demonstrated how to grow trees on reclaimed coal mine areas and how to fertilize Christmas tree varieties for best growth, said Nelson.

The family shared the "how-tos" of Christmas tree growing with many other growers from across the state and helped make Pennsylvania one of the leading producers of top quality trees in the nation. The family hosted the PCTGA summer meeting in 1973 and attended many National Christmas Tree Association meetings.

Use Monthly Report For Herd Management

The 210 or 200 Monthly Report the dairymen receive monthly from Raleigh DRPC contains a lot of information to manage the individual cow. One feature is a rating A, B, C, D, or E for each cow. This is a quick reference to help determine which cows should be culled from the herd. The rating column on the 210 report is found with the 305 Day Projection. On the 200 report it appears between the Action Code and Persistency of Lactation Curve columns. The letter ratings categorize cows in five production groups based on their current lactations. To determine the letter ratings, the current 305 day, 2X, M.E. records for all cows are adjusted to a 3.5 percent fat corrected milk (FCM) basis. The 3.5 percent FCM record for each cow is divided by the 3.5 percent FCM lactation average for the herd. The results are designated as follows:

A = Top Cows - more than 110 percent of herd average

D = Marginal Cows - 80-90 percent of herd average

E = Probable Cull Cows - less than 80 percent of herd average

The rating should not be the only factor used to determine probable cull cows but should be used as a quick check for low producers.

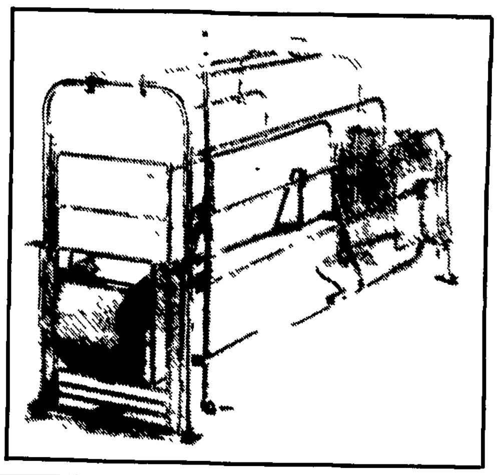
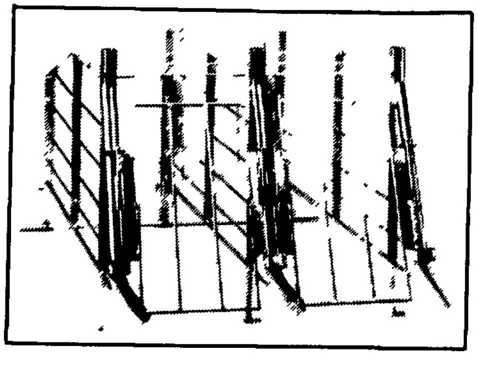
PIG SAVER "DUTCH CRATE"

Developed through testing in our research farms the goal was to develop a crate that nearly eliminates crushing, due to lay ons, unmatched durability and be easy to work around. All this has been achieved by a unique gravity filprail that forces sows to lie down slowly and using stainless steel for rear doors and legs, proven horizontal and solid steel rod construction. All this at a reasonable cost. Crate also can be installed on an angle.



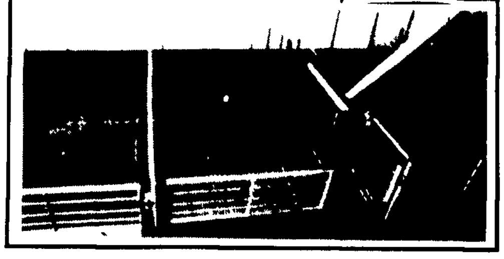


CONFINEMENT STALL

Developed recently in our R&D farm. Our goals were convenience, safety and durability. The low back and flat top rails are easy to reach over with no sharp edges. Stainless steel rear legs and front feet along with solid steel horizontal rods through punched uprights provide the strongest, most durable stall ever produced by Tri-County (21"-24" O.C. x 86")

NURSERY PENNING

Nursery penning has been improved by the use of an optional solid stainless steel panel on the front gates which keeps walkways clean. Stainless steel verticals on penning eliminates corrosion where penning attaches to the floor. Stainless steel drinker pipes & mounting brackets also increase durability.



FINISHING PENNING

Optional stainless steel verticals and fasteners offer improved durability over other similar types of penning. Loop and flapper latch arrangement eliminates the use of drop pins. Stainless steel fence line feeders provide excellent durability and a minimum of waste.

New Spin On Popular Spreader

The L2020GT fertilizer and lime spreader offers updated technology and reliability.

THE New Leader L2020 Generation Two (L2020GT) fertilizer and lime spreader, introduced by Highway Equipment Co., Cedar Rapids, IA, is designed to inhibit corrosion, reduce bridging, and improve spread patterns compared to the previous L2020 Suggestions from applicators throughout the country were used to maintain the qualities of the L2020 and create the L2020GT's updated technology and reliability This has resulted in a spinner spreader with advanced belt tracking, an advanced paint system, a field-proven Synco-Matic Mark III ground speed system, and easy maintenance and adjustments.

Application rates now can be changed and monitored right from the cab with the new generation Synco-Matic Mark III ground speed system. The system still has all the accuracy and dependability found in all New Leader ground speed systems.

The 7- and 10-gauge carbon steel hopper is fully welded, caulked, and painted with an advanced corrosion resistant paint system to provide for longer, more reliable service. The hopper body is 96 inches wide to increase payload and make hopper loading easier.

Low Maintenance

The stainless steel self-cleaning "turnkleen" idler pulley ensures belt tracking during spreading. The L2020GT has a new drive shaft design and no bearing hardware for the conveyor, which makes it easy to service the spreader and allows for belt adjustments within seconds. The new conveyor system is made to last because it has a low-maintenance, corrosion-free 3-ply straight belt conveyer which rides on a stainless steel bottom.

A Closer Look

◆ Ability to spread up to 50 pounds of fertilizer or 4 tons of lime per acre;

◆ Complete range of conveyor needs, including sturdy bar flight chain and rugged belt-over-chain;

◆ Entire body is constructed of 304 and 409 stainless steel;

◆ Mounts on vehicles with highway, semi or full flotation tires;

◆ Available in body lengths of 10 to 16 feet.

A 24-inch wide dual spinner package allows for 100% overlap patterns and up to 65-foot effective swath width. A stainless steel flow divider with a new inverted "V" design reduces product bridging by allowing product to flow precisely and continuously to the spinners. The stainless steel indicator is easy to read and provides repeatable indexing of the divider settings. The 98% efficient 6-to-1 reduction spur gear drive will last the life of the spreader.

User-friendly

Dave Engel, general manager, Waitt Companies, Cicero, IN, says the L2020GT is user- and dealer-friendly because of features like the stainless steel which lasts longer than mild steel A uniform body that fits every style truck replaces the need for a separate body on each style. Also, 6-inch side extensions now are standard, not optional. In addition, Engel says the adjustment bearings are mounted to last longer and allow for easy service FC

Father, Son To Show Ayrshires At Farm Show

In preparation for the Farm Show Large Arena, Daryl Maulfair gently tugs at the halter of his show calf to encourage the Ayrshire to come along.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

JONESTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Out of the 78 years that the Pennsylvania Farm Show has been held at its Harrisburg complex, a great many fathers and sons, and mothers and daughters, have been involved in the eternal act of guiding the younger generation in the discovery of the world into which they were born.

For Dale and Pattie Maulfair, a Jonestown dairy farm couple who have shown and won with Ayrshires at the Farm Show, it is their turn to be the example and support, the coach and cheering section at the Farm Show: their 9-year-old son Daryl is showing on his own in Farm Show youth competitions for the very first time.

The couple have three children, including Jennifer, who is currently the Lebanon County Little Miss dairy promoter, and youngest David, who is too young to be involved.

But, for this week, it can be expected that Daryl will be watched closely by his parents with a mixture of concern and joy, as he steps off on his own in a big arena, with lots of strangers watching, and other people from around the state, and a loud booming voice coming over the loudspeakers.

And if his experience is anything like that of others, his concentration on the judge and his animals will make the audience disappear.

Dale Maulfair is not boastful of his son's accomplishments, but he did note that Daryl was champion showman for his age in 4-H and at the county fair.

And appearing outsized in comparison, Daryl began entering show rings early in life, piloting the halter of some of his father's big cows in the show ring.

But this year, with a senior calf and a spring yearling, Daryl is about to take to the ring on own.

Last week, while home from school for the holidays, Daryl spent time walking his calf around the barnyard area at his parents' Maulfair Acres dairy farm.

Daryl Maulfair pulls the clippers away after finishing a cut, while his father, Dale, looks on in case any suggestions are necessary. The cow is a former grand champion Ayrshire of the state Farm Show.

According to plan, on mid-morning Tuesday, when judging of Ayrshires is scheduled, the winter coats on the calf and yearling will be trimmed down and be clean and shining.

Young Maulfair will be in his show whites. He and his animals will be making their mutual debut in the Farm Show.

He said he is excited about his first time showing, but that he isn't as afraid as he would have been if he never had been in the ring before.

And Dale said that he thinks Daryl is getting a good start because he has won some competitions locally.

Daryl had entered both animals in competitions and they were undefeated this past year, until the state 4-H competitions held in September in conjunction with the Pennsylvania All American Dairy Show.

"He did better than I did (for a first year showing). I was 16 the first year I showed," Dale said, adding that he had to wait until he was old enough to drive himself to the Farm Show.

But Maulfair said that he didn't think that winning is even close to being the most important aspect of showing dairy cattle. He said it is a reward that can help someone stay with a pursuit and it encourages effort to achieve, he said.

Daryl Maulfair, 9-years-old, and one of his two Ayrshires entered for the 1994 Farm Show. This is to be his first year showing on his own, following in his father and mother's footsteps.

Most importantly, he said that showing is a way to develop and enhance an understanding of the cattle breed and exercise an appreciation for doing so.

It is also about a lot of other, tangential activities and issues, such as being subject to judges, and listening to their reasons for placing animals; talking to other breeders, the same age, whose animals are admired and discussing philosophies, feeds, care, production, the future of the industry, the qualities of other cattle, etc.; learning finer points about skills and techniques for grooming, feeding, and some of the finer points of showing animals to accentuate their best qualities in the best possible manner.

It is learning about ethics and morals and values and how to manage time and sleep; when to laugh, and what is appropriate behavior, and when to get down to business.

And it also teaches how to cope with difficulties and how to enjoy a task.

While Daryl has had some early success in showing, Dale said his own start in showing was about 20 years ago, and it took him a lot longer to achieve some recognition.

"You want (Daryl) to win. I know when I started, I started at the bottom and for years I wondered if I would ever get to the top," Dale said.

Two years ago, however, his then 4-year-old Ayrshire Maulfair Acres Barry Ginny was named grand champion Ayrshire, and a herd mate, Maulfair Acres Larry Jessica, was reserve champion.

He has had several grand champions during the past five years and continues to be active in the Ayrshire Breeders Association, serving as its current president.

For the past several years he has served as chairman of the Lebanon County Fair Dairy Show Committee, and sponors a trophy for the top dairy animal of the county fair.

But he said he doesn't pressure his son to participate. He doesn't have to.

"You don't have to push them," Dale said about his son and other youth with whom he works as a volunteer 4-H dairy leader.

And Dale said he will help Daryl with competitions "as long as he shows an interest in showing."

On the farm, Dale said that Daryl seems to be growing into wanting to dairy farm.

"He feeds the calves and he's getting interested. There are 15 calves he feeds (once per day) on milk right now. For a 9-year-old, that's pretty good," Dale said.

Dale said that he provides some instruction for showing, but that Daryl has already picked up much from being a member of the county 4-H Dairy Club.

In fact, Daryl was honored for being the 1993 Outstanding Rookie of the Year for the Lebanon County 4-H Dairy Club.

Kenneth Winebark, Lebanon County Extension agent, said that Lebanon County has a strong adult support group for the youth programs and that Dale is an example. In addition to being a 4-H leader, he has been chairman of the Lebanon Fair Dairy Committee for years.

An ardent supporter of the 4-H program, Winebark said it continues to prove its effectiveness.

"With Daryl entering into 4-H, its to develop life skills and skills to continue in a career," Winebark said. "The dairy 4-H is of course to promote the dairy industry and a lot (of the youth) end up working in the dairy field.

"Like Becky (Rebecca) Sonnen, who started out as an 8-year-old 4-H member starting to show cows and from that developed into a lot of different areas," Winebark said. "She developed public speaking skills, being involved with dairy judging, being a member of the state dairy bowl team and going to nationals, pursuing a career as an agricultural advocate, being a state dairy princess, and now she works as program director at MAMMA (Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Agency).

"The 4-H program gives youth that opportunity to excel, to develop career potential and career opportunities. It's much more than showing cows, but that's where it starts for a lot of them," Winebark said.

He said he will also be watching as Daryl takes to the show ring. But he said he knows that Dale will join him in also watching and checking up on other county youth at the Farm Show.

"I think the Maulfair family is a family that is looked up to, from the standpoint of dairying in our area," Winebark said. "Both come to the showring and are involved in the dairy industry, and now, as 4-H leaders, they've been very, very involved.

"The support from parents and grandparents is what really makes these opportunities available to the kids. And both Dale and Pattie are there to help out not just their kids, but other kids too," he said.

Maulfair is more humble about his involvement, especially showing, and said that it is effective advertisement, but more so, "It gets in your blood. It's a hobby. It's not a money making thing anymore.

"When your out there it makes you feel good, even to be there. A lot of people get turned away," Dale said.

"It makes you feel good and when you win, you feel even better."

Of course, the Maulfairs aren't the only ones whose child or children will be making a Farm Show debut this week. There are others. Every year.

Even though the number of dairy farms continues to decline and the number of dairy cows continues to decrease, the children seem to still be there, showing cattle, Maulfair said.

"I think the youth are still hanging on. (The dairy shows) seem to be as big as they ever were," he

New Milk Spokesperson At Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Sunday, January 9, the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) will unveil its newest spokesperson at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg. He will join the ranks of baseball greats Mike Schmidt and Cal Ripken Jr., who have endorsed nature's most nearly perfect food — milk.

A tight shroud of secrecy has been clamped down around the ceremony. In a brief statement, MAMMA officials would only say, "He's big, very big, and he drives, but not very well." MAMMA's new spokesperson is also reowned for his accomplishments on the baseball field.

Sources have discovered that the new milk celebrity's last known address is a location in south Philadelphia. When our source attempted to interview this new star, rather than talking he tried to stuff a bystander into his snout, then stepped on him with his size 25 "EEEE" shoe. The bystander was not injured in the incident, but did say afterwards that he was feeling "a little of green."

Plans call for Pennsylvania's Governor Bob Casey and Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff to handle the official unveiling on Sunday. It will occur at booth 348 in the Main Exhibit Hall shortly after the official ceremonies marking the opening of the Farm Show.

Poly Square Means Healthier Calves

All-Season

Big Foot 5'x7'6"

The Poly Square Big Foot is constructed of Opaque material to eliminate the solar effect. It blocks out sunheat-not sunlight. Poly Square's inverted ribs and 5'(W)x7'6"(L) make it the biggest unit on the market today and extremely wind resistant. It has no pop rivets which means no breaks or cracks for snow and rain to sift in. The unit weighs 100 pounds plus manger & buckets. And Poly Square Big Foot is large enough so your calf can lay in the center, away from cold walls in the winter. Use Poly Square with our side feed station and bottle holder which is perfect for use with a fence in a more traditional setting.

New Side Hay Feeder — Made especially for Poly Square Big Foot, no other unit has this feature. Also has a center roof vent for better air movement.

Berks Sheep Family Heads For The Farm Show

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

LENHARTSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Sheep figure prominently in the lives of the Bowman family here.

From the more than 60 head of Dorset and Corriedales on their 25 acres along Old 22 to the numerous stuffed and wood sheep toys placed throughout their home, it's obvious sheep farming is a way of life.

Mother Nancy, a third-grade teacher at Kutztown Elementary School, laughingly describes the family's life as "work, fun and chaos."

Along with attending all the shows in Berks County, the Bowmans look forward each year to participating in the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

It was father, Roger, an eighth grade science teacher at Fleetwood Junior High School, who got the family involved many years ago when he bought his first head of commercial sheep.

Stephanie, 16, can say matter-of-factly: "I've been around sheep all of my life."

Once Stephanie showed interest, the family purchased some purebred Dorsets for her to breed and raise.

Maybe it is the way the sheep become snowy white after they are shorn that endeared this breed the Stephanie and her brother Michael, 18, as they began to get involved in 4-H and started winning prizes.

"(The Dorsets) also have good mothering instincts," Stephanie said.

Almost every year since Stephanie has been involved with 4-H sheep projects, she has won fitting and showmanship awards and Blue Form awards as she gained experience.

"As I got older I've gotten heavier competition and more experience," she said about her progress.

Right up there as well, Michael has consistently captured showmanship awards around the county. In 1993, he won the 4-H senior showmanship prize.

As the Bowmans' sheep get better, they hope to capture more market prizes, and they seem to be on their way.

Last year, Stephanie won the reserve champion market lamb at the Reading Fair, for which she received $385.

"We're still celebrating," said Nancy. "It took a week for (the winning of) that award to sink in."

Winning awards is not the only pursuit of Stephanie and Michael as they engage in their sheep careers. They also are involved in leading the troops.

Michael is the president of the Kutztown FFA, and Stephanie is vice president. Both attend Kutztown High School and both are active in the Berks County 4-H Sheep and Lamb Club.

In addition, Stephanie, who also is the Berks County Wool queen, following the footsteps of her good friend, Amy Eshelman of Shillington, who was the Berks County Wool Queen for two years and also state wool queen.

Stephanie hopes to copy her friend once again and eventually capture the state wool queen title. But that competition is about a year away.

As wool queen, Stephanie will be expected to do at least three wool promotions in county schools this year.

Projects using wool are nothing new to Stephanie, because she is also involved in clothing and textiles in Fleetwood Community 4-H

(Turn to Page A37)

Taking time out from farm chores and school activities, Stephanie Bowman spins some yarn from raw wool while her family looks on: mother Nancy; brother Michael and father Roger.

Program Awards Environmental Education Grants

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Students from high schools across the state are conducting a variety of "hands-on" environmental education activities thanks to grants made available by the Pennsylvania Envirothon Program. Funding for the grant in the amount of $4,000 has been provided by the Pennsylvania Electric Association through its Special Committee on Energy Education.

The Envirothon is an environmental education program targeted toward high school students. Teams of students are provided with a variety of educational materials throughout the year and use their knowledge to compete with other students in their county. Winning teams proceed to state and national events.

This is the first year in the history of the Envirothon that grants such as these have been made available to schools. The grants were made available to all teachers who participate in the Envirothon Program. Teachers from more than two dozen schools applied for grants.

Up to this point, students have been concentrating on learning. These grants will provide an additional aspect to the program by allowing students to implement the knowledge they have accumulated in a practical way. At the same time, students are completing tasks that will benefit their entire community by allowing educational opportunities for the general public.

One such example is the creation of a nature trail with teaching stations which can be used for classrooms and adult education activities. Other activities range from stream monitoring and cleaning to producing a slide show on energy production in Pennsylvania for science classes. All of the activities will place a special emphasis on energy or energy conservation.

"We are very excited about this program and hope that it will provide teachers with the opportunity to expand their Envirothon experience by conducting activities that show the close interdependency between energy and the environment," said Bill Bartle, chairman of PEA's Education committee.

For more information about the Pennsylvania Envirothon Program or this grant program, write to the Envirothon at 225 Pine Street, Harrisburg, PA 17101, (717) 238-4998 or contact your local conservation district office.

Ag Republicans

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Republican State Committee Chairman, Anne Anstine, whose family owns Annlick Farm Supply in Port Royal, has been chosen as the Keystone Speaker for the Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Ag Republicans. The meeting will be held at 2:00 on Monday, January 10th in Room C of the Farm Show Building, in Harrisburg. Mrs. Anstine has served in the capacity of State Chairman since 1990. Previous to that, she was the Vice-Chairman for six years. The entire membership is encouraged to attend this meeting. Agenda items for the meeting include upcoming dates and event announcements, committee reports on membership, public policy and public relations and a legislative update given by Representative John Barley, House Policy Chairman.

Club. For Fashion Revue, she always makes something out of wool. Last year at the Reading Fair, she won the senior lead line for her outfit — a wool dress with a wool, Bolero jacket.

The hardest part about the project is finding the wool, some of which must be boiled, Nancy said.

"We have to get it in Philadelphia or send away for it," she said.

In her spare time, which isn't much, Stephanie tries her hand at spinning wool on her spinning wheel. It's fun, she said. It just takes time and patience to keep the yarn even.

Nancy and Roger also are active in the community. They are both 4-H leaders, and Nancy is on the 4-H development committee, whose chief project at the moment is to build a pole barn behind the 4-H community Center in Leesport. Roger is vice president of the Berks County Wool Growers Association.

In a unique twist, Michael is involved in a work-study program where he works part-time on the Barry Gauker farm in Fleetwood. For this he gets paid and receives two course credits. For all of his efforts in FFA, he will receive the Keystone degree at the Farm Show.

In between all these activities, there's the Farm Show to get ready for. This will be the seventh year at the Farm Show for Stephanie, who has received two third-places in showmanship. Last year she also won fourth place in the crossbreed market hogs category.

Hogs are animals Stephanie likes a lot, but, with all the sheep on the farm, there is no room for pigs.

"I would love to have them," Stephanie said. "They're easy to get ready for show and to fit. They're a lot less work than sheep."

In the junior shepherd contest at the Farm Show the last two years, Stephanie finished sixth place out of 20.

In the fleece division, Roger said their entries usually do well, taking first and second in ram fleeces and second and fourth in ewe fleeces.

But the market lamb division is what the Bowmans want to capture.

"Our sheep are a little on the small side," Roger said as he ushered a visitor into the barn to unveil their hope for the future: a large yearling Corriedale ram named "Dick."

A large animal, Roger said Dick is considered to be an "extreme ram," whose genetic characteristics ought to help the rest of the flock in height and length.

About a dozen of the ewes are bred to Dick, and the next few months will tell them how good he is as lambing season starts.

Before then, Stephanie and Mike hope their 10 animals pull in more prizes at the Farm Show. Each will show five of the animals.

"We work together," Stephanie said about their lack of competition between each other.

That spirit is the kind Rick Kauffman, Berks County 4-H extension agent, said is what helps build a good 4-H community.

"They are extremely hard working people and very dependable," he said about the family. "They really work well together and they give a lot back to the program."

said.

And they are changing.

"It's getting more professional at the local shows. (The youth) actually have to know more," Maulfair said. "The level of competition is higher."

However, he said that isn't bad, as long as the parents help keep the events in perspective and allow the children to learn and grow and enjoy the experiences, and do not try to direct it and make winning more important than the child.

Winebark said that's also his opinion.

"It's really the whole backbone of the whole 4-H program," he said. "It is the qualified and dedicated leadership (parents) that we have on a volunteer level.

"The Maulfairs are just like a lot of other people, willing to dedicate time and help to get things started," Winebark said. "Without volunteers, without these leaders, the 4-H program is nothing."

Winter Forums Scheduled

innovative animal identification methods, by-law proposals and any other topics requested by those attending the forum.

National Secretary Steve Kerr and other Brattleboro staff will answer questions on how the association does its business. Changes in the works will be explained. If you are a Holstein breeder, John Selz, national president, asks for your attendance so that the association has a personal communication link for a stronger association. "Now more than ever the association needs to hear from you," Selz said.

Dates And Locations

The Holstein Winter Forum for the Maryland, Northern Virginia and Eastern West Virginia area will be held on Tuesday, February 1, at the Holiday Inn, Frederick, located at I-270 and MD Route 85. Starting time is 8:30 a.m.

Two meetings are scheduled for Pennsylvania. On Wednesday, Feburary 9, at Days Inn Butler Conference Center, 139 Pittsburgh Road, Butler. And on Thursday, February 10, at Sheraton Inn East, 800 E. Park Drive, Harrisburg. Starting time both days is listed as 9 a.m.

Meetings are planned for all dairy areas across the nation. Other dates and locations in the East are as follows:

Thursday, February 3, 9 a.m., Guilford County Agricultural Extension, 3309 Burlington Road, Greensboro, NC.

Friday and Saturday, February 4 and 5, 1 p.m. (Fri.), 8 a.m. (Sat.), Atlanta Marriott, Gwinnett Place, 1775 Pleasant Hill Road, Duluth, GA.

Tuesday, February 8, 9 a.m., Columbus Marriott/North, 6500 Doubletree Avenue, Columbus OH.

Thursday and Friday, February 17 and 18, 12:30 p.m. (Thur.), 8 a.m. (Fri.), Howard Johnson, Olde Kings Highway, Route 5, White River Junction, VT.

Monday and Tuesday, February 21 and 22, 1 a.m. (Mon.), 8 a.m. (Tue.), Holiday Inn Syracuse, State Fair Boulevard and Farrell Road, Syracuse, NY.

Call your local Holstein Club or state association for more information. "Build a stronger industry through your breed association," Hoff said.

For winning dairy rations . . .

"Select the seed before the feed"

Determining what hybrids to plant for corn silage and calculating dairy rations seems like two conflicting specialities. Lee Lutz has found that the two fit like a glove.

As a marketer of feed and seed, Lutz believes that applying corn-silage research conducted by Cargill Hybrid Seeds can help increase dairy herd profitability. The research clearly shows that some corn hybrids are more digestible and have better feeding qualities than others.

Hybrid recommendations for silage are not taken lightly in dairy-dominant Chenango County, New York, where Lutz and his father operate Smyrna Feed. Much of the corn acreage in the county is chopped for silage. The Cargill Hybrid Seeds Forage Quality Program emphasizes what Lutz has long believed—that the basis for dairy rations with high production capacity should start with a fine-tuned hybrid selection program.

"I know that when we supply feed to a dairy producer he expects herd production to meet his goals or he might look for another feed supplier," says Lutz. "That's why it's an advantage to recommend corn hybrids that I know will help assure top forage quality because improved digestibility is important for top milk production."

Surprising Hybrid Differences

Cargill and university research show some surprising differences among corn hybrids that grabbed Lutz' attention. Conducted since 1987, the work shows large differences in both forage and grain yields and in silage-quality attributes for different hybrids. The resulting data base of corn silage traits identifies hybrid genetics with superior tonnage and enhanced feed value. This allows dairy and beef producers to select corn hybrids from a corn silage menu. This menu—divided by maturity groups—lists key forage quality traits for energy, protein, fiber and fiber digestibility, identifying which hybrids within a maturity are best suited for corn silage production.

Is the difference in silage quality attributes among hybrids wide enough to even worry about? No question, says Lutz. Cargill research shows average hybrid differences for the following traits: Neutral detergent fiber (NDF)-17%; crude protein-14%; fiber (NDF) digestibility-12%; and whole plant digestibility-6%.

"This information is another management tool that the dairy producer of the 90s can use to become more efficient.," comments Lutz. "It allows me to make better recommendations to help dairymen improve their forage quality and their bottom line. Good forage quality means I can do a better job of formulating a feeding program since it addresses an important production variable."

HYBRID SEEDS
SMYRNA FEED

As a marketer of feed and seed, Lee Lutz believes a good feeding program for high-producing cows begins with planting highly digestible hybrids for corn silage.

"When my dealer told me that cows fed AminoTek® would peak, on the average, 8 pounds higher than cows fed conventional feeds, I was skeptical. But after only a few months on the AminoTek program, I'm a believer."

AminoTek feed, one of a family of Bypass Protein Technology Feeds developed by Central Soya Feed Company, Inc., utilizes state-of-the-art technology to address the absorbed protein needs of the high-producing dairy cow. AminoTek significantly improves the amount of amino acids reaching your cows' small intestines, resulting in increased peaks and improved persistency of your high-producing cows. Its bypass protein process is so advanced, it's protected by four patents.

More Milk Means Higher Profits

- Milk production-Research shows that cows fed AminoTek peaked 8 pounds higher than cows fed conventional protein feeds.
- Milk composition-Maximum microbial protein and bypass protein not only boosts milk production, but supports a higher fat and milk protein content.
- Improved breeding performance-AminoTek provides a better balance of degradable and bypass protein, resulting in higher fertility rates.
- Higher peaks and improved milk persistency-Cows fed AminoTek will peak higher, and the decline in post-peak milk production will be more gradual, thus improving persistency.

See your Master Mix® dealer today and ask about the RECORD-BREAKING PERFORMANCE of AminoTek feed. You, too, will become a believer.

ENJOY YOUR TIME AT THE PA FARM SHOW

Amos and Patricia Good with sons, from left, Justin, 18; Christopher, 10; Patrick, 14; and Jonathan, 7, talk about the Pennsylvania Farm Show where the two oldest sons will show hogs. Justin has been showing for four years, but it will be the first time for Patrick, who has never participated in activities except those for children with special needs until he became a member of the 4-H swine club.

Farm Show Provides Opportunity For Autistic Teen To Participate In Livestock Competition

Progress was slow, but Patrick learned to speak words, phrases, and short sentences.

His pronounciation skills are precise, but his range of words is limited and sometimes causes frustration. Like many children who are limited in communication skills, Patrick, when younger, often became extremely frustrated and threw temper tandrums, which have become more controllable with time.

At a young age, Patrick participated in sensory intergration therapy to help him gain balance and motor skills. As a preschooler, Patrick was enrolled in a Montessori program that provided hands-on learning.

Unlike many children diagnosed with autism, Patrick, right, presents a friendly grin and a warm handshake when greeting visitors. His older brother Justin helps Patrick with paperwork and gives him pointers for the upcoming 4-H swine competition at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

The summer when Patrick was four, he, his mother, and brothers temporarily stayed in Washington D.C. so that Patrick could be part of a summer program where teachers were trained in working with neurological disorders and where Patrick could be closely observed by professionals.

"It was a wonderful school. Because autistic children have difficulty in learning abstracts, the school combined academic teaching with experiential learning to stimulate the children to sense the world with their bodies," Patricia said.

Patrick's parents debated enrolling him in a specialized school. Because they wanted Patrick to continue to live at home, they searched for a school nearby, but were unable to find a more specialized school nearby. Patrick studies with the Intermediate Unit 13 services.

His father Amos together with his brother Ezra, have long been involved in raising quality swine on their 200-acre partnership farm near Denver that includes a livestock trucking business and a swine receiving station for Hatfield.

Patrick's brother Justin, now 18, and his cousins have showed hogs in livestock competition for many years. Last year, when Amos first suggested that Patrick might be able to participate, his mother had reservations of his ability to compete with those who did not have the same limitations he does.

The family was estactic when Patrick went into the showring at the first local competition and did as the other exhibitors were doing. He followed his own pig and seemed determined to keep it moving by giving it continual taps.

At 4-H meetings, Justin watches over his brother and helps with the paperwork that Patrick cannot do.

Overall, Patrick seems to enjoy the shows. A few times that he did not want to show, his brothers were able to show for him. By the next competition, Patrick is ready to try again.

He likes to get a ribbon. If he doesn't, he does not get upset.

When the brothers visit the farm, Patrick seems proud to say, "going to get our pigs ready." And, when the brothers attend a 4-H meeting, he says with obvious pride, "Justin and I are going to a meeting."

Justin said of his brother's participation in 4-H, "I think it is good for him to socialize outside of school. It's the first time he's been able to do things with regular kids."

Of Justin's apparent support of his brother, his mother said, "It is not unusual for families of children with special needs to see siblings help and support each other."

When Justin was much younger, he complained once of the unfairness of Patrick getting so much attention.

"You're right," his mother said. "It isn't fair. But neither is it fair to Patrick to have special problems. We need to work together to help him."

Since then, Patricia said, Justin does extremely well in watching out for Patrick. "We want our children to have a perfect life. But it is good for them to face challenges," she said. "It is amazing and wonderful to see understanding and compassion develop."

Farm Show Provides Opportunity

In order for his classmates to understand autism, Justin invited his mother to visit his classroom and speak on autism at Garden Spot High School, where he is now a senior and member of the Grassland FFA. This is the fourth year for Justin to show pigs. Justin will show four FFA project pigs at the state Farm Show. Patrick will show in the 4-H division. The Goods purchase their hogs from Thames Bend in Canada. This past season, Justin showed the grand champion hog at the New Holland Fair and the reserve champion at the Ephrata Fair.

It's been difficult journey for the Good family, which, in addition to Justin, includes brothers Christopher, 10, and Jonathan, 7, who work together in helping Patrick develop his potential.

The outlook for Patrick today is brighter than for many autistic children. He independently dresses himself, eats breakfast, and waits for the school bus.

He attends the Life Skills Support Program at Warwick High School through Intermediate Unit 13, where academics, speech, language, and personal care is taught to help mentally handicapped students become independent.

Patrick can use a calculator to add, but it is not certain that he understands the meaning of what he does, because he can't really express himself.

He wants to be independent and will sometimes insist, when family members attempt to help him, "No, do it myself."

For the most part, the behavior problems have subsided. Temper tantrums are rare. Some of these improvements are in part the result of his parents' realization that Patrick responds best to a highly structured environment. Whenever change is imminent, Patrick needs an adjustment period.

Patrick likes to listen to Rock and Roll and Country music. Star Trek is his favorite television program. He does not like cartoons.

Generally Patrick doesn't want to try new foods. He seldom goes outside to play with neighborhood children except in a structured environment.

Until Patrick began to show hogs, his relationships with other children was limited to those with special needs, such as playing on the Challenger Baseball Team and swimming at the Red Cross Swim Center.

Patricia is amazed at the heartwarming acceptance that Justin has found in 4-H club members.

She said, "He has had no negative experiences. He enjoys going to 4-H meetings and showing. It has been a very positive experience."

To visitors, Patrick proudly shows off a framed picture of himself showing a hog in competition and says, "I'm going to the Farm Show. I'm going to show my pig."

Friends Of Tobacco To Rally

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Tobacco farmers throughout the United States will join forces to march on Washington in a "United Effort — Rally" coordinated by North Carolina members of Congress and the U.S. Senate.

The rally will take place on the west side of the U.S. Capitol building on January 26 to discuss the "unfair and punitive" tobacco tax that is being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee, according to a release from Friends of Tobacco.

The Clinton Health Plan calls for an increase of 75 cents a pack of cigarettes, plus increases on other tobacco products, to fund the universal health plan for all Americans.

Industry representatives indicate the tax may have a severe impact on tobacco farmers in Pennsylvania and other states. North Carolina representatives called Friends of Tobacco, based in Seven Springs, N.C., claim that a tax of this proportion will cause 12,500 North Carolina farmers to go out of business and force the loss of numerous manufacturing jobs related to the industry.

As of presstime, Georgia, Virginia, Kentucky, and North Carolina will be participating with other states in the rally.

Friends of Tobacco indicated assistance is available for those needing transportation arrangements. For more information, contact Dean Rouse, chairman, at (919) 569-7171.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Last year, I saw the Farm Show.

I mean, last year, I really SAW the Farm Show.

For about two decades, every turn of the new year saw us making preparations for a week-long stay as exhibitors in the Farm Show's dairy barn. As each January rolled around, it was time to fit cattle, gather signs and decorations and try to bring order from a show box into which everything was tossed and then forgotten after the last fall cattle exhibit had ended.

Farm Show week was always a favorite cattle competition for The Farmer. It was his vacation for a couple of days, a chance to renew friendships with fellow exhibitors and that with Farm Show visitors. Sot it was with real mixed emotions that, after the kids had "graduated" from 4-H competition, we let our entry blank for the show go unfilled.

Farm Show attendance as a visitor instead of a delivery person of show supplies, clean/dirty laundry, foodstuffs and kids is a whole different experience for this former show exhibitor/commuter. A full day to just visit and explore the offerings at Farm Show allows time to see those little things that I usually missed during the years of dahsing to Harrisburg and back between morning and evening barn chores.

Now there's time to browse through displays llike sewing, crafts and canning, admiring the handwork and creativity of these entries. To envy the patience of those who pack perfect jars of peaches or beans.

How there's time to wander through the pens of turkeys and the geese, the exotic chickens with feathered feet and fluffy-feathered heads. To admire the FFA diaoramas on subjects ranging anywhere from conservation to safety to recycliing. To pause at the Penn State booth and watch a science video or ponder a new computer program.

Now there's time to study and enjoy the posters hung above crowd height in the machinery exhibit, depicting historic farm life in Pennsylvania. To stroll with The Farmer through displays of new technology and shiny equipment, where he dreams (and I cringe when he starts checking prices.) Time to sit and watch the cattle show, admire the flowers for sale and display, collect a few nursery catalogs for future reference, check up on the yield information of the newest hybrid corn and alfalfa varieties.

Now there's time to linger over the fresh, crisp vegetable displays, compare the prize-winning varieties of edible nuts and marvel at the perfection of the champion dressed turkey. To enjoy the colorful kaleidoscope of twirling square dancers or the competitive excitement of the horse and pony pulls.

Now there's time to people watch: wide-eyed kindergarteners with noses pressed tight against the glassed-over chick-hatching incubator, toddlers poking chubby fingers into the soft fleece of a lamb, fashionably-clad non-farm teen-agers making a wide berth around a manure stack in the dairy barn, young parents herding three small children who all want to see different things at the same time; wrinkled, veteran farmers squinting at computerized combines and digital-readout control panels.

Now there's time to sample Farm Show's offerings of Pennsylvania's finest goodies in the attractive and efficient food court area: thick milkshakes and steaming baked potatoes, spicy deep-fried mushrooms and sweet, chilled apple cider.

Yes, we miss the friends, the fellowship, the opportunity to mingle with Farm Show visitors who stopped by to chat during our years of show camping and commuting.

But it sure is enjoyable to have time to go SEE the Farm Show.

Don't Let Gathering Firewood Turn Into Tragedy

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Many people will go to the woods this season to saw firewood and several may be injured or killed in chain saw accidents, says an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Trained, professional chain saw operators use proper personal protective equipment, well-maintained modern chain saws, and appropriate safety procedures to keep themselves and their co-workers at minimum risk of accident or injury," says Lee Stover, research assistant in the School of Forest Resources.

Stover, who teaches chain saw safety, says that people who use chain saws infrequently can be at a risk of incurring a chain saw related accident. "Occasional users are much less likely to have a well-maintained saw and personal protective equipment. They probably have not had safety training and lack the skills needed to reduce chain saw hazards."

"One of my biggest concerns is that occasional users may not recognize the hazards in a cutting situation until they experience them," he says. "This may be too late, Professional users are trained to understand the hazards associated with the chain saw itself and can analyze the hazards in an area before starting to cut."

A key hazard of chain saw use is kickback, "If the chain on the upper quadrant of the tip of the guide bar touches an object such as another log or branch, the saw can suddenly jerk backward and upward," Stover says.

"To help avoid kickback, one should always be aware of the position of the tip of the guide bar and keep it away from all objects."

"For a better understanding of how to operate chain saws safely, study one of the modern chain saw safety manuals available from many major chain saw manufacturers," Stover says. "Check with your local dealer or distributor."

Common safety recommendations for chain saws include:

— Grip the saw firmly with both hands when the engine is running. Keep the right hand on the rear handle and the left hand on the front handle, with thumbs and fingers encircling the handles. This helps to maintain control in the event of kickback. Keep the handles dry, clean and free of oil or fuel.

— Make sure your cutting area is free from obstructions. Do not let the nose of the guide bar contact a log, branch or any other object.

— Cut at high engine speeds.

— Do not overreach or cut above shoulder height.

— Do not operate a chain saw when you are fatigued.

— Use safety footwear, snug-fitting clothing, protective gloves, and eye, hearing and head protection. Do not start cutting until you have secure footing and a planning path to retreat from the falling tree.

— Use extreme caution when cutting small brush and saplings. These may catch on the saw chain and be whipped toward you or pull you off balance.

— Keep bystanders, especially children and domestic animals, out of the work area.

— Do not operate a damaged or improperly adjusted chain saw. Be sure the chain stops moving when the throttle control trigger is released.

— Follow the manufacturer's sharpening and maintenance instructions. Only use replacement bars and chains specified by the manufacturer. Occasional users should ask for reduced kickback bars and low kickback chains.

Easy Steps To an Omelet

For economy, versatility and even elegance, a quick-and-easy omelet is a cook's delight. Because eggs offer high-quality protein at a bargain price, an omelet is a great budget-stretcher. When eggs are 90 cents a dozen, a plain 2-egg omelet costs only about 15 cents!

Appropriate as morning eye-openers and as midnight snacks, omelets fit today's meal-in-a-minute needs. They adapt well when family members need to eat at different times or simply have different food preferences.

Almost any food — including leftovers — can fill an omelet, so it can be diet-wise, hearty, plain or fancy. Prepare the filling before you begin to cook the omelet. A just-cooked omelet will be hot enough to melt cheese and warm some filling ingredients such as yogurt, peanut butter, jelly, or chopped fruits. Fully cook raw foods or heat refrigerated foods.

Best of all its attributes, an omelet can be ready to fill in less than a minute!

1. Beat together 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons water, 1/8 teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper and/or your favorite herb until blended.

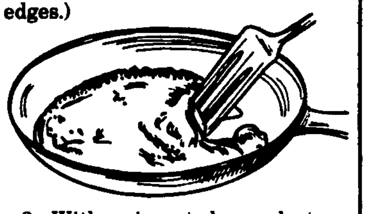
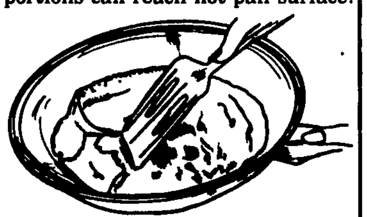
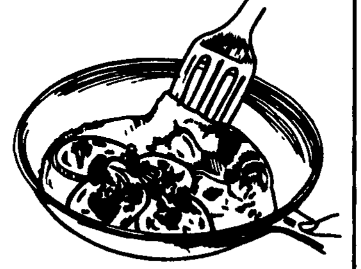
2. In 7- to 10-inch omelet pan or skillet over medium-high heat, heat 1 tablespoon butter until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Or, use vegetable spray-on for less calories and fat. Pour in egg mixture. (Mixture should set immediately at edges.)



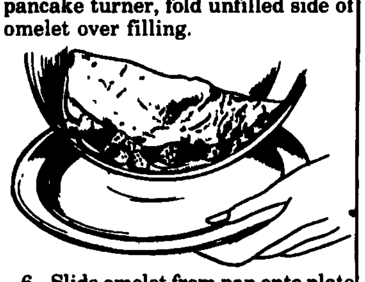
3. With an inverted pancake turner, carefully push cooked portions at edges toward center so uncooked portions can reach hot pan surface.



4. While drawing cooked portions toward center, tilt pan and move cooked portions as necessary.



5. While top is still moist and creamy-looking, spoon about 1/2 cup filling on one side of omelet. With pancake turner, fold unfilled side of omelet over filling.



6. Slide omelet from pan onto plate or invert onto plate with a quick flip of the wrist.

Taking Time To Listen

One of the great things about being an aunt is that I can fine-tune "parenting" .skills in small doses. Well last week I failed miserably as I responded to a niece who declared defiantly that I was "bad" simply because I gave her a different mug of hot chocolate than she wanted. I should have acknowledged her disappointment. I didn't. I wasn't listening. I was very busy reassuring myself and her that I definitely was NOT bad.

This incidence reminded me of another situation observed recently in Allentown. A mother was walking on a downtown sidewalk with her preschool ,son. The son was talking eagerly to his mother but the mother had a walkman plugged into her ears. Finally the mother commented, "I can't hear you." To which the son shouted, "I'm never going to talk to you again?" And in the long run that may be the truth.

Being a parent is an exhausting, sometimes frustrating job. And when you're fatigued, it's easy to slip up. But it is very important to devote a substantial chunk of your limited energy to listening to your children. The earlier you start this listening pattern, the more benefits you'll reap during the moody adolescent years.

Adele Faber and Elaine Mazlish, authors of the well-known parenting book How To Talk So Your Kids Will Listen and Listen So Your Kids Will Talk, suggest several tips. First they say listen with full attention. While listening, try to avoid denying the child's feelings, providing quick advice or questioning constantly.

Practice responding with a simple "Mmm" or "Uh-Hugh" and an understanding, "You must be really disappointed." These are preferred to more common responses like, "You can't be hot. Keep your sweater on." or "What did you do to provoke him?" When a person listens to a child and acknowledges her pain without offering quick solutions, the child begins to feel less upset and confused. Often the child arrives at a good coping solution on her own after talking it through with someone.

The toughest part of this listening/talking routine is probably giving full attention to the child and then giving a name to the child's feeling — anger, disappointment, frustration, loneliness, boredom. But the reward for this pattern is great. Faber and Mazlish describe a conversation where the parent and child become increasingly hostile:

"Son: I'd like to punch Michael in the nose!

Father: Why? What happened?

Son: He threw my notebook in the dirt!

Father: Well, did you do something to him first?

Son: No!

Father: Are you sure?

Son: I swear, I never touched him.

Father: Well, Michael is your friend. If you take my advice, you'll forget about the whole thing. You're not perfect you know. Sometimes you start up and then blame someone else — the way you do with your brother.

Son: No, I don't. He starts up with me first . . . Oh, I can't talk to you."

With a simple "Oh" and "You're really mad," this situation could have resulted in a more positive exchange. This week take the time to accept someone else's feelings during a conversation. Listen carefully, provide a name to the feeling, and avoid offering quick advice.

'Currant' Affair Gene Bank Preserves Fruit

As health-conscious Americans look to foods for natural vitamins, one fruit is waiting in the wings, so to speak, at a "gene bank" in Oregon.

That fruit — the sweet-to-tart currant — now is grown mainly in Europe. England, Scotland and Poland are the leading countries producing currants.

A few acres of currants are grown commercially in Oregon and Washington. But more bushes of the blueberry-sized fruit might be planted in this country if potential markets strengthen, notes Kim E. Hummer of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

What currants have in their favor, besides taste, is that they are a source of vitamin C. And, all-natural currant juice, made by crushing fresh black and red berries, adds rich purple to juice blends or sparkling beverages sold today in the U.S. These drinks — plus jams and jellies — may attract new interest in the fruit, says Hummer of USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Currants are sometimes confused with the similarly named Zante currants, which are grapes that dry into mini-raisins used for scones, fruitcakes and other baked goods. "But our currants," says Hummer, "are a gooseberry relative and members of a plant group that botanists call Ribes. And our currants grow on bushes, not grapevines."

Hummer oversees more than 200 different kinds of currants in her role as curator of the ARS National Clonal Germplasm Repository at Corvallis, Ore. She makes samples available to plant breeders and researchers who may want to develop varieties for this country.

Hummer's gene bank stores black, red, pink and white currants from all over the world, notably from England, Scotland and Poland. Also, the repository safeguards currant's wild relatives — plants that might otherwise be lost. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture)

CORRECTION — In the Dec. 18th issue, a recipe for peanut butter bars appeared without the amount for peanut butter. Thanks to Elizabeth Oberholzer, Chambersburg, who wrote that she experimented with the recipe until she found the perfect amount and everyone loved the bars. Here is the correct recipe.

PEANUT BUTTER BARS

2 cups crushed graham cracker crumbs
2 cups peanut butter
2 cups confectioners' sugar
¼ cup butter

Mix together ingredients like pie crust mix. Chill at least 1 hour. Form into small balls. Dip in melted coating chocolate. While dipping, keep chocolate on low heat. Place on wax paper and chill overnight. Store in tight container.

ANSWER — Thanks to Dorothy Monie, Newville, who has a suggestion for the Chambersburg reader who had questions about her Hitachi bread making machine. Dorothy also has a Hitachi. She has poor results using any other yeast then Fleishmann's Rapid Rise. She tried bulk and other brands.

She uses 1 package Fleishmann's for 1 large loaf bread that she bakes on either bread or bread rapid cycles. Raisin bread is baked on the mix bread cycle. She does not thing that bread baked on the delayed time cycle is as good. The recipes that came with the machine work well.

ANSWER — A New York reader wanted a recipe to make venison sausage. Thanks to John Shank for sending a recipe. He has an extensive brochure with many recipes, hints, directions and items needed for those interested in making their own sausages or curing their own meat. He does not use sodium nitrite or saltpeter in his recipe for cure mix. To receive a copy, send $1 and your name and address and say that you read this in Lancaster Farming; otherwise, it costs $5.

Venison Polish Sausage

2½ pounds fine ground venison
2½ pounds medium ground pork
2 teaspoons ground white pepper
2 teaspoons monosodium glutamate
1 teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon ground marjoram
2 teaspoons garlic powder
Liquid smoke, optional
1 cup water
6 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
Hog casings

Mix meat and all ingredients by hand for 5 mintues. Stuff into hog casings. Place n refrigerator overnight, not to exceed 12 to 16 hours. Cook in water at 160 degrees until internal tempertaure of sausage reaches 155 degrees. Cool in water until internal temperature is below 90 degrees. Store in refrigerator. Use within 10 days or freeze.

Keep Ornamentals Safe From Deer, Rabbits

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Now is the time to protect young trees and shrubs from deer and rabbits, says Dr. J. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "While other animals may cause damage during the winter, these are the main culprits in Pennsylvania," says Nuss. "They can damage and kill plants that are expensive to replace."

Deer are browsers, preferring to nibble on the buds, twig-ends and leaves of woody plants. Browsing destroys new growth and deforms shrubs and trees. Extremely young plants may be eaten completely.

Unless you have a large number of young trees and shrubs to protect, the most economical and practical method is fencing individual plants. "Many homeowners enjoy seeing deer on their land and don't want to fence them out of the entire area," says Nuss. "Individual fencing allows deer in the garden but keeps them from causing mischief."

To fence a plant, drive three or four tall wooden stakes into the ground around it, about 48 inches from the trunk, or far enough away to prevent feeding in the lower branches. Attach woven wire or plastic mesh to these stakes to form a circular fence.

"Fencing must be high enough to protect all parts of the plant within deer's reach," says Nuss. "If the tree or shrub is under 3 feet tall, you will need to make the fence several feet taller than the plant."

Young trees and shrubs should be fenced every fall until their primary branches are about 5 feet high. "Inspect your fencing at least once a week," says Nuss. "After heavy snowfall, you may need to make it taller. Deer can walk across hardened snow and nibble on the tops of plants."

If you have many plants to protect, you can surround the entire area with woven-wire fence at least 8 feet tall or at least 11 feet tall if the land slopes and deer can jump from above. "This method is expensive but will keep out other destructive animals as well," says Nuss.

Chemical deer repellents are another alternative and can be bought from garden centers. A homemade repellant can be made from 6 spoiled eggs, 3 gallons of water and 3 tablespoons of 75 percent Thriam, a mild fungicide. "Plants sprayed with repellants taste and smell unpleasant to deer," says Nuss. "But they wash off in rain and snow, and won't deter extremely hungry deer."

If deer are a severe problem, consider planting trees and shrubs that naturally resist browsing. "No plant is completely deer-proof, but trees such as box elders, black locusts, pines and spruces resist deer damage," says Nuss. "Barberries, hollies, tree peonies, rhododendrons and lilacs are deer-resistant shrubs."

Rabbits can cause as much damage as deer, chewing the bark off young trees and shrubs. Rabbits can kill plants by girdling them — gnawing off a ring of bark all the way around the trunks. "Fortunately, they're easier to control than deer because they can reach only to about 24 inches high," says Nuss.

A variety of rabbit-proof wrappings, available at garden centers, can be quickly and easily wound around plants' trunks. These wrappings are weatherproof but should be checked regularly to make sure they're still securely wound.

Individual fencing also is practical and inexpensive. "It can be constructed the same as deer fencing, except that the bottom of the fence must be buried 2 to 3 inches into the ground so rabbits can't tunnel underneath," says Nuss.

"Rabbit fencing should have holes no larger than 1 inch," says Nuss. "Stakes holding the fencing must be firmly planted and the mesh must be securely attached. Otherwise, rabbits can press against the mesh and nibble at the plant right through the holes."

Larger areas can be fenced the same away, with the bottom of the fence curled outward and buried 2 inches. "Whether you're using plastic wrapping, individual fencing or large-area fencing, make sure it's at least 24 inches tall," says Nuss. "If snow accumulates, the fencing must be 24 inches higher than the snow. Check larger fenced-in areas frequently. If a rabbit does get caught inside, it may not be able to escape."

Chemical repellents also will keep rabbits away from ornamental plants, but they must be reapplied frequently, especially after it has rained. Hungry rabbits competing for food will nibble plants even if they are treated with a repellant.

"With a little time and care, you can protect young ornamentals from deer and rabbits," says Nuss. "Of course, no method is 100 percent effective, and you may have a little damage each winter. As young trees and shrubs grow, the problem naturally will diminish."

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Sheryl Wolfe, Wellsboro, requested a recipe for peanut bread made without yeast. Thanks to Anita Moyer, Bernville, for answering.

Peanut Butter Bread

2 cups whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup peanut butter
1 cup sour milk
1 egg, beaten

Mix and sift dry ingredients; rub in peanut butter. Add egg to milk and put the two mixtures together to make a thick batter.

Grease coffee cans or loaf pans well; fill two-thirds full. Let stand 15 mintues, then bake at 325 degrees. If desired, use white flour instead of whole wheat.

Peanut Butter Bread

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
¼ cup butter
⅔ cup peanut butter
2 eggs
1 cup milk

Sift together dry ingredients. Blend in butter and peanut butter with pastry blender until it resembles coarse meal. Beat eggs and milk together. Combine mixtures. Spoon into a greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for about 1 hour or until done. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Remove and cool on rack. Slice. Yield: 1 loaf.

Father-Son Bonding Happens At Old Oley Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

OLEY (Berks Co.) — William Willits III shares more than the same name with his father — William Willits II. The 12-year-old, nicknamed Sandy, and his father spend many hours in the sheep barn.

"I learned about lambing before I was walking," Sandy joked as he told about sleeping in the barn with his dad during lambing season.

The Willits, who live on a 25-acre farm in Oley, raise 50 Dorsets. Seven of the home bred Dorsets will ride in the Willits' newly purchased truck for Pennsylvania Farm Show competition that begins this week.

"We had to get a bigger truck to pull the trailer," the elder Willits said.

As father and son discuss Farm Show preparations, excitement edges their voices.

"I hope we can wash the sheep at home before we go," Sandy said.

The farm is set up with a big blow dryer for livestock, but the Willits don't like to expose the sheep to water unless the outside weather is 30 to 45 degrees.

It's been much to cold, at least when this article was written. So the Willits will need to wait their turn at the Farm Show Complex where water and dryers are available for exhibitors.

The Willits use Ivory Snow and No Tears shampoo around the face to prevent irritated the eyes.

The elder Willits is the leader for about 30 members of the Berks County 4-H Sheep Club.

Having a father for a 4-H leader has its advantages, according to Sandy.

"I don't miss any of the shows because he reminds me," he said.

Because Willits is a leader, he usually takes two to three weeks vacation from his job as a computer program to attend 4-H activities.

The lambing pens are ready for the lambing season that is expected this week. It may require the elder Willits to skip some of the Farm Show activity and stay home to check on ewes. If not, Lavery, Sandy's stepmom, is in charge. She said that she doesn't lose any sleep when she is in charge because she believes in letting Mother Nature take her çourse.

She does check the flock before bedtime and dries the newly-born lambs in the morning.

The main concern is to make sure the ewe is a good mother and does not reject the lamb.

The Willits had no birthing deaths last year. They attribute the high birth rate to well-fed sheep that get plenty of minerals.

When fair and Farm Show season arrives, Sandy cheers about three things:

- Going to the shows
- Getting out of school
- Getting prize money.

This year, Sandy has another achievement to celebrate. He has been one of the 20 junior 4-H'ers selected to participate in the Junior Shepherds Contest.

Judging is based on a one hour blocking contest, wool judging, equipment identification, sheep judging, feed identification, and a 20-question quiz.

In addition to the state Farm Show, the Willits' fair circuit includes Reading, Oley, Kutztown, and Allentown.

"My best show ever was the Oley Fair this year," Sandy said. There, he showed the grand champion ewe and was named champion fitter.

In addition to breeding sheep, Sandy raises some market lambs that he keeps in shape by running them back and forth on a platform built outside the barn.

Sheep names are chosen by how a sheep acts or appears. Included in the entourage of sheep are names such as Zip and Zap, Bottle Babies, Mikey and Harold, and Zeus.

Some sheep become a bit spoiled and Sandy admits to becoming too attached to a few when it comes to selling the market lambs. "But some of the others, I'm glad to be rid of," Sandy said.

He finds it frustrating when a sheep refuses to cooperate during a show.

"You can do good in a show, and then you make one mistake because of a bad day from an animal," Sandy said.

One lamb follow Lavery around the yard as she worked in the flower beds, but the lamb needed to be curtailed when she began eating more than grass.

Sandy's mother, Jane Renner, lives nearby and often helps with transportation to shows and other details.

Sandy is a seventh grader at the Oley Middle School. Next summer, Sandy will participate as a People-to-People Ambassador for a three-week educational trip to Australia and New Zealand. About 20 students from Berks County will participate in the program that is slanted toward science education and includes a marine biology dive. Students are selected from interest and achievement in science.

Sandy is hoping to survey sheep and cattle ranching during his trip to Australia and New Zealand, where sheep numbers are profuse.

Prize money from Farm Show standings will go toward the $800 needed for his New Zealand and Australian trip.

Sandy enjoys playing football, basketball, and baseball.

"I like to be active outside, but I also like to read," he said.

Sandy's dad said that he thinks sheep raising offers a great opportunity for father and son to be together. He was raised on a Chester County beef farm and received bachelor's and master's degrees in animal science and ag education. He works as a computer manager and yearns to be in agriculture. That's why he started raising sheep about 20 years ago. At first, he started with crossbreeds, then switched to Dorsets because they can be bred twice annually and out of season.

The family lives on the 1850 Old Oley Farm that has been in Lavery's family since 1952. It's a picture-perfect farm with a spacious stone house. Sheep graze among the tall, whispering pine trees and split rail fences line the property.

A miniature donkey named Max, a pony named Paso Fino, two steers, a dog, and several cats take up animal residency in the barn.

Sandy is raising the steers for another 4-H project.

The father and son are especially happy to attend the Farm Show this year because they missed it last year when the elder Willits was hospitalized.

These are some of the 50 Dorsets the Willits raise on their farm in Berks County. William Willits III, nicknamed Sandy, and his father spend a lot of time in the sheep barn.

Sandy, William II, and Lavery review the rules for the Junior Shepherds Contest in which Sandy was selected to compete.

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — When Roy Rogers was scheduled to come to Chambersburg in the mid-1980s to promote his restaurant, local seamstress Darlene Scott was commissioned by Peter Plamondon, owner of several Roy Rogers restaurants, to make something for the movie star.

The former junior high school home economics teacher created a 30" x 30" quilted wall hanging with four scenes representative of Franklin County.

After the presentation ceremony, Roy Rogers and Darlene chatted over refreshments at a reception. "We were just standing there talking, like he was an ordinary person," she remembered.

But Roy Rogers wasn't chatting with just any ordinary person, either.

A slight woman with an upbeat attitude, Darlene walks with leg braces and crutches. A bout with polio at age 7 left her legs completely paralyzed. This has never impaired her ability to operate a

Housewife's Potato Salad Launches $55 Million Business

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW OXFORD (Adams Co.) — When Harry Seifert asked his wife to make some potato salad to sell at his small-town grocery store, he was only trying to stay ahead of his creditors. Instead, the potato salad and a few other Pennsylvania Dutch deli items launched Winter Gardens into nine states with sales of $55 million last year.

"We have no secret for our sucess," Seifert said. "We live by the golden rule — honest value and a concern to treat employees and suppliers the way we want to be treated."

When Seifert talks about his company that is listed by INC. Magazine as one of the the top 500 privately held companies in the U.S. based on percentage increases in sales between 1986 and 1987, he doesn't brag about the financial successes, which he says mean little to him. Instead, he is most proud of customer and employee loyalty.

"Our salads are more upscale and may cost a little more than some of our competitors, but customers are willing to pay it. It's like if you want a Cadillac, you aren't going to be satisfied with a Chevy," he said.

Although Seifert spent 39 years working for other employers, the desire to own his own store was rooted when he was 6 years old. Then he visited his grandfather who owned a grocery store.

"I thought he had the nicest job because he could get a piece of candy whenever he wanted," Seifert said.

As a high school student, Seifert took a part-time job managing the meat department for Weis Markets. Later, he worked as a salesman for a meat company, then bought a farm so that he could be his own boss. It took him less than a year to figure out that he couldn't make money in farming, so Seifert went back to working in the supermarket and later selling agricultural products.

Although he was successful as a salesman, he had less success in being treated fairly by employers. He said, "My advice to anyone who works in a family business is to make sure you're family."

After being left out in the cold when a family business was sold and some other disappointing experiences with being a non-owner of a growing company, Seifert decided to strike out on his own.

He said, "I had made money for everyone else that I worked for so I thought I could probably make some by being my own boss."

Seifert made no promises to his wife, who was willing for him to sacrifice a guaranteed paycheck for the pleasure of being his own boss.

He started with a little store front that had a frozen locker service — hence the name Winter Gardens.

In those beginning years, it was common for Seifert to go without sleep one or two nights a week because it was a one-man operation. "I opened and closed the store, and bought, sold, and delivered the meat myself," he said.

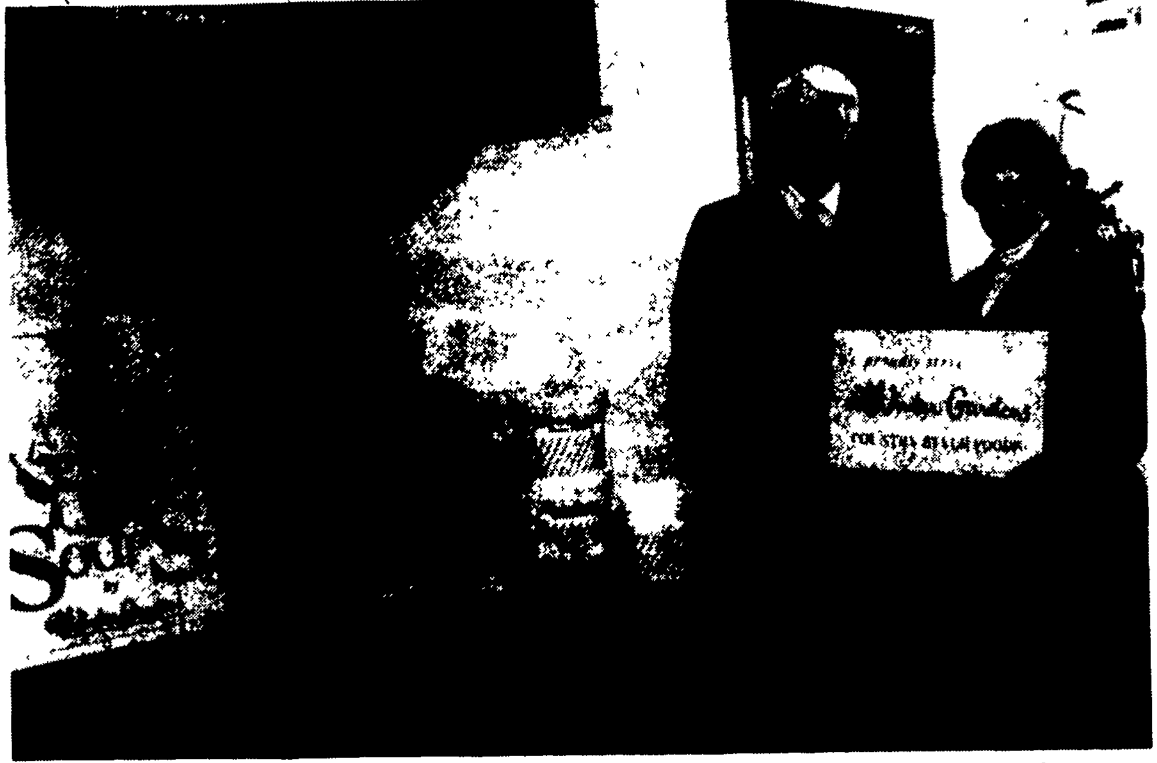
If business slowed down during the day, Seifert got on the phone to make new business contacts for his products.

He asked his wife to make potato salad in order to entice purchases from some customers who came in to use the locker service. An unplanned pregnancy resulted in her no longer being able to make the 10-pound batch of potato salad in her kitchen, so Seifert hired Mattie Hoover to make potato salad. With no degree in food science, Mattie proved to be just what Seifert wanted — an ordinary person who could do extraordinary things.

It was Mattie who developed the company's number one best seller—Amish Macaroni Salad.

"Other people have tried to copy it, but we have the original recipe and no one else makes it better," Seifert said. The company also holds the copyright to the Amish Macaroni Salad name. Mattie also developed the famous Watergate Salad.

Mattie said that the origins of Watergate Salad started when the company wanted to make something special for St. Patrick's Day. When she came up with the rich-tasting green dessert, she needed a name.



Harry Seifert, president of Winter Gardens, credits Mattie Hoover, a 25-year employee, with developing favorites such as Amish Macaroni Salad, Watergate Salad, and more than 200 other items. •

"It was during that mess in Washington, so I named it Watergate," she said of the scandal that ultimately resulted in President Nixon's resignation.

Another customer favorite Cream Cheese Delight, a baked cheesecake dessert, required a lot of work for Mattie to develop the texture and taste that her boss envisioned.

Many people eat Winter Green's items without realizing it because the products are sold wholesale to deli's, groceries, and fast food and upscale restaurants. The company manufactures soups, salads, desserts, and entrees of more than 200 items.

"Our purpose is not to promote our own name," Seifert said. "We strive to supply our accounts with the best items possible."

The finished product can be only as good as the ingredients used. Most of the suppliers have a 20-year relationship with Winter Gardens because it never considers another product even if it costs less — only if it is better.

Many vegetables grown locally are unsuitable for use in Winter Gardens products, Seifert said, because many things needed to be considered such as cabbage, which must have a high iron content to keep well in salads. Cabbage must be hand harvested to prevent bruising. Seed for the cabbage variety is purchased for $400 a pound from Denmark and provides enormous heads.

The business caters to the changing consumer. "We are not selling food as much as convenience," he said. "The buyer is more sophisticated, a higher percentage of women are working, and families are changing. There is more demand for fresh entrees and fully-prepared items."

While consumers are concerned about health issues and cholesterol levels, Seifert said that it hasn't affected sales.

"We see 'schizophrenic' eaters who drink skim milk but binge on Haagen-Daz ice cream."

He said, "Desserts are selling well. There continues to be a demand for pleasure foods, probably because life is difficult for most people and the only thing left is dinner."

While people continue to splurge on desserts, the search continues to find a way to make healthy foods more affordable and flavorful.

As president of the Refrigerated Food National Association, Seifert said that he often visits Europe and brings some ideas home. Some European countries are further advanced in chilled prepared foods because Europeans shop daily for foods.

In addition to required USDA quality control in the plant, an on-site certified lab continually tests products for weight, bacteria, color, and other influences that affect the product.

Strict logs are kept of temperature of trucks and every item from the field to the store so that if a problem develops, it can be traced to the source.

For ideas to add to the line of products, Seifert pours over cookbooks compiled by churches and organizations. When he finds a recipe that he thinks will appeal to customers, he asks Mattie to adapt it. This often means many trial testings because Seifert doesn't want customers viewing Winter Gardens' items as being commercially prepared.

Before a new item is introduced to the market, a taste testing session for "good cooks" is held. Sometimes competitors' brands are used anonymously with the proposed item. Nothing is released unless Winter Gardens' wins the taste testing competition.

"My wife has remarkable taste buds. If she likes something, it suits most people," Seifert said. He doesn't consider himself as good of a judge of what will or will not sell.

"We sell Peanut Butter Crunch Dessert that is so rich and sweet that I thought it would never sell," Seifert said. "But it has been selling like crazy."

Seifert developed Seafood Lasagne, which he thought would be a sure winner, but it did not sell well and was eventually dropped.

Sometimes, it's a matter of timing, according to Seifert. Some items that are dropped are later reintroduced and do well.

New items are introduced to the market at selected stores by handing out a sample for tasting. Repeat sales of the new product is monitored for six months to a year before it is determined the item is a success or a failure.

"Forty-three percent of our products are copied by competitors," Seifert said, "but we consider that the highest form of praise. We still have the original recipes and the best."

Customer complaints are held to almost zero, according to Seifert, who introduced the "matterhorn" to plant employees. If, at anytime, an employee sees or senses that something is wrong with an item, he or she pushes a buzzer to sound the matterhorn. The assembly line shuts down until the problem is resolved.

Every batch of food is also taste-tested before it goes to customers.

Seifert spoke about the company's phenomenal growth. "If growth had come earlier, I probably would have dropped the ball. Sometimes you need to put the brakes on by not taking on more business than you can handle correctly."

Seifert believes in treating his employees as he would like to be treated. "My generation has left a lousy legacy that has messed up this generation morally and emotionally," he said. "The best way to

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Winter is a time to slow down a little. At least it is a time when I can do some of the things that I've been putting off for months.

Now I find a few minutes here and there to read a new magazine that I ordered in the spring. And, the other day an expensive hardback book arrived in the mail. I've only glanced through it but I am a bit disappointed as it does not have the information that I expected. It lists all the cemeteries in Lancaster County but not the names of the people who are buried there. Guess I should have read the advertisement more carefully.

During the winter months by houseplants get more attention. I also hope to find time to bring some scrapbooks up to date. There are also many, many photos that should be put into special albums. These are enjoyable activities but they do take time.

Now is when I reap the benefit of all my hard work in the summer. The freezers full of vegetables and fruits make meal preparation easy. I'll probably even find time to roast some of the peanuts and that are hung on basement beams.

Entertaining guests is another time consuming venture that I enjoy. There are always new recipes to try and new ways to decorate our home. Recently we had some of our Canadian pictures enlarged and we framed them in Christmas gift frames. Although, we do have our own walnut frames as Allen has found time to make some large and small ones for all of our children.

sewing machine, however; she's been sewing since elementary school. She started out on her mother's Singer, pushing its knee pedal with her hand. Now, she puts her machine's foot pedal on the table and runs it with her right hand while guiding the material through the needle with her left.

Darlene loves — and is highly skilled in — crafts and needlework of any kind. "I do crafts," she says with a smile, noting that her daughter has a button that says, 'I don't do crafts.'

When she lived in Mont Alto several years ago, Darlene had a craft shop called Farm House Crafts. She took consignments of other people's crafts, in addition to selling her own. She still uses the Farm House name at the crafts shows she attends.

A juried member of the Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen, Darlene sells her wares at shows from New Oxford to Boonesboro, MD. Since her three children are grown — the youngest is in college — she has cut back on the number of shows she attends, as she needs help to "pack up, load up and set up" her items, she said. She has sold crafts to stores in Harrisburg, York, and Georgetown, MD, and also retails from her home. At her recent Christmas open house, her best sellers were cross-stitched ornaments and "prairie" or "church" dolls, made from squares of fabric.

While Darlene puts in long hours on craft-making just before a show, she works in a more relaxed manner at other times. Often, she'll stitch while watching television in the evening. "I can't just watch TV; I have to be doing something," she said.

Darlene makes special orders, such as appliqued Christmas stockings for her customers, and has done a few weddings.

Sun bonnets are a specialty, and she usually enters some in the local fairs and does well with them. This year, she entered items in the Shippensburg, Franklin County and South Mountain Fairs. "If I come home with a $30 or $50 check, I figure that was worth it," she said.

A former 4-H member and leader, Darlene has entered crafts in the Farm Show on and off for many years, starting during her senior year of high school. That first entry, stencilled placemats and napkins, earned a second place ribbon.

"Some years I don't get things in," she said, because after the busy holiday season, "all of a sudden it's January 4th and I have to have my things at the Extension Office." Because she hasn't attended the Farm Show in several years, she usually doesn't find out how her entries have placed until she picks them up at the Extension Office afterwards. Almost always, ribbons are attached to her projects.

In the 1993 Farm Show, a bridesmaid's dress she wore in a friend's wedding placed third. The dress was pink with puffy sleeves, a full skirt and a cummerbund.

Her stack of entries usually includes some quilted items, probably pillows this year, she said.

The wall hanging she created for Roy Rogers included sash work, just like a full-size quilt, Darlene said. It now hangs in Rogers's museum in California.

Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Americans are eating more fruits and vegetables, low-fat milk, and poultry than ever before — that's the good news. We are also consuming more cheese, cream, and too much dietary fat.

The USDA measures food consumption patterns in the United States every year. The date is based on the disappearance of food from grocery shelves rather than the amount of food consumed by the average American. The 1990 figures probably overestimate consumption because the number includes food waste and spoilage. Nevertheless, you can use the numbers to compare your meals with the national trends toward a healthier diet.

Are You Eating More Chicken and Less Steak Than You Were A Few Years Ago?

If so, you, like many other Americans, have made the switch from meat to poultry. In 1976 we were eating almost two pounds of beef a week, but by 1990 our weekly intake had decreased to little more than a pound. In contrast, our intake of chicken and turkey during the same period increased from about 3/4 pound to over one pound a week.

Are You Eating More Cheese?

You may be using less cheese in meal preparation, but in fact, cheese consumption over the last twenty years has doubled. With the increase in convenience foods, especially pizza, mozzarella has become the second most popular cheese in the United States. Cheddar cheese is the most popular.

Are You Dining On More Beans And Rice?

If you have included more lentils and split peas, or limas, kidneys, and black beans in your diet, you are in the minority. Most Americans eat only about 1/4 cups of cooked beans per week — the same as in 1970. However, we are eating more rice. Our rice consumption has jumped from about 1/3 cup per week to more than 3/4 cup.

Are You Cooking Omelets Or Pouring More Cereal For Breakfast?

Most Americans are eating fewer eggs today than they ate 20 years ago. Today we consume about 3½ eggs per week — two fewer than in 1968. And we are eating more cereal— over four cups a week compared to three in 1968.

Are You Spending Less Butter And Pouring More Salad Dressing?

If you are watching your fat intake to help control your blood cholesterol level, you are like most Americans. As a nation we have decreased our fat intake by 5½ percent since 1986. But we still eat a high fat diet (about 37" of calories from fat). We average about 16 teaspoons of fat a day, but our source of fat is changing. Consumption of animal fats, and especially butter, has steadily declined since 1968, while vegetable fats, such as salad dressings, have increased. This change reflects the healthy move towards unsaturated fats.

Are You Pouring Low-Fat Milk On Your Cereal, But Cream In Your Coffee?

The USDA reports that while we have switched from whole to low-fat milk, our intake of such high-fat cream products as sour cream, half and half, and heavy cream has increased by one-third in the last 10 years. As more low-fat and fat-free dairy substitute products appear on the market shelves, however, this present trend may decline.

How Do You Do?

If you are doing everything right — good for you! But if you are like most Americans, you are probably striving for a healthier diet. Lots of vegetables and fruits can help you reach that goal.

clean up society is to start with the children."

For this reason, the company offers a free on-site day care for employees' children from 12 weeks to 13 years, and free counseling for every family member. Employees also can further their education for free in any area they desire.

"People who are willing to spend time making themselves better are more valuable employees," Seifert said.

"In the plant, we do maintenance on machinery. It only makes sense to do maintenance on people. If we enhance people's lives, they appreciate it and make the company work."

Seifert is proud that the company has an extremely low turnover rate. "We don't participate in economic slowdowns or recessions," he said.

Family Recipes Can Be Prize Winners

CHICAGO, Ill. — Good cooks often add their own twists to traditional meals, creating new recipes that are delicious and convenient. Whether designed for family dinners or special entertaining, those are just the types of recipes that could win big at the 1995 National Beef Cook-Off®.

Entries are now being accepted for the National Beef Cook-Off, which food experts recognize as one of America's foremost cooking competitions. Qualifying recipes must be original creations of amateur cooks, ready in an hour or less and contain no more than eight ingredients. Sesame Beef Salad

Total preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes

1 pound boneless beef top sirloin steak, cut 1 inch thick
8 ounces fresh pea pods, cut diagonally in half if large
4 to 8 ounces uncooked thin rice noodles or vermicelli
Water
1 tablespoon dark sesame oil
1 large red or yellow bell pepper, cut into julienne strips
1 tablespoon sesame seeds
1 small head Boston or Bibb lettuce
1 small head radicchio
1 tablespoon sesame seeds
Marinade:
3 tablespoons peanut oil
3 tablespoons rice vinegar
5 teaspoons soy sauce or tamari
½ to 1 teaspoon hot chili oil (preferably with garlic)

1. Heat large heavy skillet over medium-high heat until hot. Place beef steak in skillet and cook 9 to 12 minutes for rare to medium doneness, turning once.
2. Trim fat from steak. Carve steak into thin slices. In medium bowl, combine marinade ingredients. Add steak slices; toss to coat. Cover and set aside in refrigerator.
3. In large pot, bring water to a boil. Add pea pods; cook 1 to 2 minutes or until crisp-tender. Remove from water; immediately rinse pea pods with cold water. Drain; set aside.
4. In same boiling water, add noodles. Stir; cook 3 to 5 minutes or until tender. Drain; rinse with cold water. Using large spoon, press noodles against strainer to remove excess water. Drizzle noodles with sesame oil; toss to coat.
5. In large bowl, combine reserved beef, pea pods, bell pepper and 1 tablespoon sesame seeds. To serve, arrange lettuce and radicchio leaves on serving platter. Top with noodles. Arrange beef mixture over noodles. Garnish with 1 tablespoon sesame seeds.

Makes 4 servings (serving size: 1/4 of recipe).

Finalists in the 1995 National Beef Cook-Off will prepare their dishes at the National Beef Cook-Off Final, to be held Sept. 21-23, 1995, in Little Rock, Arkansas. Entries are due June 1, 1994.

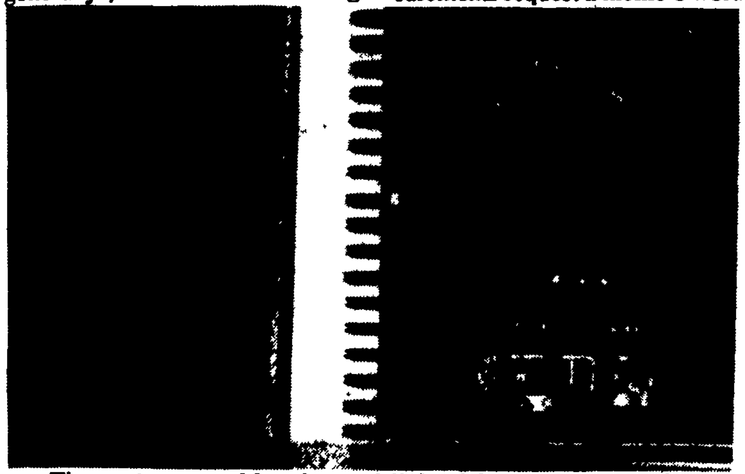
State Grange Reissues First Cookbook

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A taste of great-grandma's cooking, a nostalgic glimpse of bygone days, and humorous reading is in store for you if you order a reprint of Pennsylvania State Grange's original cookbook.



These two cookbooks published by the Pennsylvania State Grange will be available for purchase at the Grange booth during the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

The hardbound cookbook has 168 pages of recipes. Some measurements request a nickle's worth of dough and a lump of lard — which are not the most practical instructions — but if you can't duplicate the recipe, you'll certainly enjoy reading how great grandmothers cooked in those days.

Included in the cookbook are helpful hints, which may not pertain to today's lifestyles, but certainly reveal that housework is definitely less time-consuming today.

Consider this hint that appears in the cookbook: When putting elastic in the small bloomers that must be washed often, I put a hook on one end and an eye on the other. It is easy to take out for laundering and the ironing is easy, not much time is needed to replace the elastic.

If you were recuperating from an illness in the early 1900s, you probably would have been serving the following:

INVALID SOUP

Put 1 tablespoon butter in sauce pan, fry in this ½ slice bread nice and brown, pour over this 1 cup boiling water, add 2 tablespoons milk. Season with a little grated nutmeg and serve hot.

For a special touch at a company dinner, you may have been served this salad.

CANDLE LIGHT SALAD

Cut bananas in half and place in the hole of a slice of pineapple. Scoop out top of banana for cherry. Pour over marshmallow-whip after placed on a lettuce leaf and serve with or without nuts.

The cookbook abounds with Pennsylvania Dutch favorites such as Schnitzenknepp.

SCHNITZENKNEPP

Take some sweet schnitz (sweet apples dried with the skins). Put in kettle with good sized piece of bacon. Brown sugar enough to make them taste pleasant. About twenty minutes before you want to serve dinner, add the knepp, which is simply dumplings made out of dough raised with yeast, cover tightly and serve together.

This dish was usually made on days when bread baking was in progress. Now when we want schnitzenknepp we send to the bakery and get a nickel's worth of dough and work that up into dumplings.

Many of the recipes may be a bit difficult to duplicate if you are not an experienced cook because the recipes are brief and take for granted that the average cook knows exactly how to whip white sauces, dumplings, and other staple dinner items.

The cookbook, originally published in 1925, is reprinted and

Food Sleuth Tracks Down Sources Of Salmonella

PENN STATE (Centre Co.) — Dr. Kathryn Kotula keeps a hectic schedule, teaching and doing research as an assistant professor in the departments of food science and animal science and agricultural biochemistry. But she still finds time to solve mysteries as part of her service activities.

Kotula isn't the kind of detective who dashes around murder scenes, shouting, "the butler did it!" Instead she is a professional food detective, piecing together the complex puzzles of food-borne illness outbreaks. More formally known as an advisor and expert witness, Kotula has rendered her professional opinion in about a half-dozen legal cases in the last three years.

As an expert in microbiological food safety, Kotula does her sleuthing for the food product segment of the agricultural industry. In one case, 187 people were stricken with salmonellosis after eating at a diner. The diner attempted to sue its egg supplier, claiming that the Salmonella originated on the farm.

Kotula poured over innumerable inspection reports and affidavits before reaching an opinion. As a food scientist, she recognized that eggs, meat and other poultry products may contain Salmonella entertitidis. However, she also knew that in the case of this bacteria, it's easy to prevent foodborne illness since Salmonella is killed by heat and easily inhibited by cold and proper sanitation.

Kotula's solution to the mystery of the salmonellosis outbreak? — improper and unsafe handling of food at the diner. Kotula found no evidence proving a link between the outbreak and the egg farm. But the diner had been written up for numerous health violations before and after the outbreak.

Kotula says food sleuthing helps her to be a better teacher.

"Through my research for legal cases, I stay up-to-date on exactly what is happening out there with salmonellosis outbreaks," says Kotula. "I bring this data back to my classes and share what I've learned."

For example, just before Thanksgiving, she gave a class lecture on food safety. Upon their return to campus after the holiday recess, Kotula's students reported on ways they helped modify holiday cooking practices.

Some students reminded harried cooks not to reuse a cutting board after cutting raw poultry unelss they cleaned it thoroughly first. Others stressed the importance of proper thawing techniques, pointing out that meat should never be thawed on the kitchen counter. Still others became aware of the importance of refrigerating or freezing leftovers promptly, before bacteria are given an opportunity to multiply.

Kotula would like to see everyone become food detectives, ever-vigilant of the ways that food should be handled.

"The vast majority of food-borne illness outbreaks aren't traced to the food producers, but to improper food storage and preparation," Kotula says. "Consumers must take responsibility for their own food safety by keeping hot foods hot, cold foods cold and hands and utensils clean."

Jennifer Flinchbaugh Develops Show String

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — As a six-year veteran sheep exhibitor, Jennifer Flinchbugh has developed a philosophy about the size of a show string.

"It is better to show a couple good ones than a lot of poorer ones." figures this 12-year-old shepherd.

Jen's entries for the 1994 Farm Show open a new show year, on the basis of an extremely successful one for her at local, regional and national sheep shows. It was a year that spanned the excitement of a reserve breed champion on her first trip to the North American International Livestock Exposition in Kentucky and a heartbreak when her favorite ewe died an untimely death in a freak accident.

At the age of 12, Jennifer Flinchbaugh has amassed an impressive array of show ribbons, plaques, plates, and awards through the half-dozen years she has been parading lambs across the tanbark. With her parents, Ed and Lou Ann Keeny, Jennifer has helped to truck, wash, trim, halter-break and show sheep from the family's Walnut Lane Farm, York R8, since she was six.

Last year's Farm Show competition earned Jen the reserve champion honors in the market lamb lightweight division. A personal goal of hers is to someday exhibit the champion overall market lamb in the highly-competitive show of some 200 entries, with only a single entry allowed per exhibitor.

"It takes a very, very, very good sheep to do that," emphasizes this goal-oriented exhibitor. Crossbreds, she adds, usually make better market class entries than purebreds.

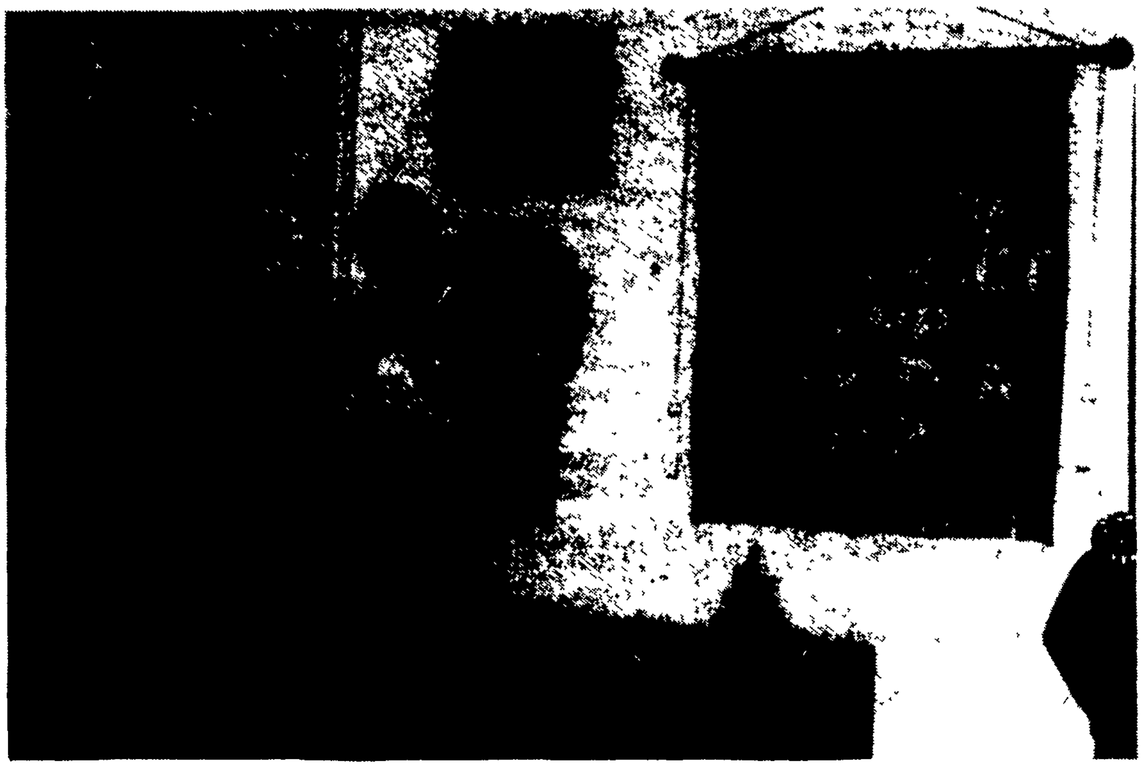
From her present flock of about 50 animals, she captured numerous champion and reserve awards in both breeding and market lamb classes at summer and fall shows throughout the region. Jen wrapped up the show year in November by snagging reserve champion Southdown ewe honors at the noted Louisville international show, taking fifth in the breed's futurity class and copping a third place showmanship award from more than 20 junior exhibitors of all ages.

Wilma, her since-retired winning ewe, had earlier earned breed and supreme honors during the fall Eastern National show at Timonium, Maryland and junior show breed honors at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition in Harrisburg. She also exhibited the champion Hampshire ram at both shows and took the champion natural colored ewe honors at Eastern National and the Maryland State Fair.

Early on, her parents encouraged Jen to work with various breeds to decide which she liked the best. She is now narrowing her breeding focus to concentrate primarily on her favorites, the Southdowns.

"I like their calm temperament," Jen says of the gentleness of her Southdowns, and adds jokingly, "and they can get fat on air." That efficiency of feed conversion is especially important to Jen, since she is responsible for managing both the income and expenses of her livestock enterprises.

It's feeding time for Jennifer Flinchbaugh's pigs. Four of her Yorkshire breeding animals and one market pig are entered for Farm Show competition.



Ribbons, plaques and banners from the North American International Livestock Exposition and the York Fair are among the numerous awards won through 1993 by Jennifer Flinchbaugh with her Southdown, Hampshire and natural colored sheep showstring.

In fact, Jen estimates that she can grow out her Southdown lambs on half the feed of the somewhat larger Hampshires. She does plan, however, to maintain a group of about 15 Hamps within her flock for show and market animal purposes.

Three years ago, this shepherd decided she would like to diversify a bit and acquired a few 4-H project show pigs.

"My grandpa and my dad had pigs in FFA," explains Jen as one of her reasons for getting into the pig breeding and showing business. She now has about a dozen, four of them market animals. Because of her relatively small number of breeding pigs, Jen and her parents are contemplating use of artificial insemination for her gilts and sows in the future, as more practical and safe than housing a boar hog.

"I chose Yorkshires partly because that's the breed my grandfather had and because they have good temperament and good mothering abilities," she explains of her selection process.

She will show the one-per-exhibitor allowed in Farm Show market and sale competition as well as a few breeding class entries. During a previous Farm Show sale, Jen found herself in possession of the hats of two potential buyers. She went into the sale ring wearing one — with her pig wearing the other. The advertising effort paid off, earning Jen a higher-than-average, per-pound sale price.

A year ago, Jen took out a Youth Loan through the Farmers Home Administration in order to rework some of the farm's facilities for her livestock. She's already repaid half the loan, returning virtually all of her pig income into paying off the debt. Her goal is to be debt-free in another year.

Having to write checks from her own checking account for loan payments has been a learning experience for Jen, her mother Lou Ann says. She recounts a recent observation of Jen's that it is much more fun to be a lender than to be a borrower.

Jen is a seventh-grade student at Dallastown Middle School, where she plays violin in the school orchestra. A member of the county's 4-H lamp and pig clubs, she practices with the livestock judging team and hopes to qualify for the junior team when she is old enough.

With an eye toward her future, Jen plans to pursue a career as a large animal veterinarian. Though college is several years away, she's already thinking about Kansas State, where her uncle is on the university staff, or perhaps remaining a bit closer to home at Penn State.

For now, caring for her growing number of animals takes about 45 minutes each day, longer on weekends when pens and barns get added cleanout time. Lambing time for the family's 45-head flock will soon get under way; Jen helps at lambing whenever an extra pair of hands is needed. Three bred nanny goats, kept primarily as pets, and two riding horses round out the barnyard population at Walnut Lane Farm.

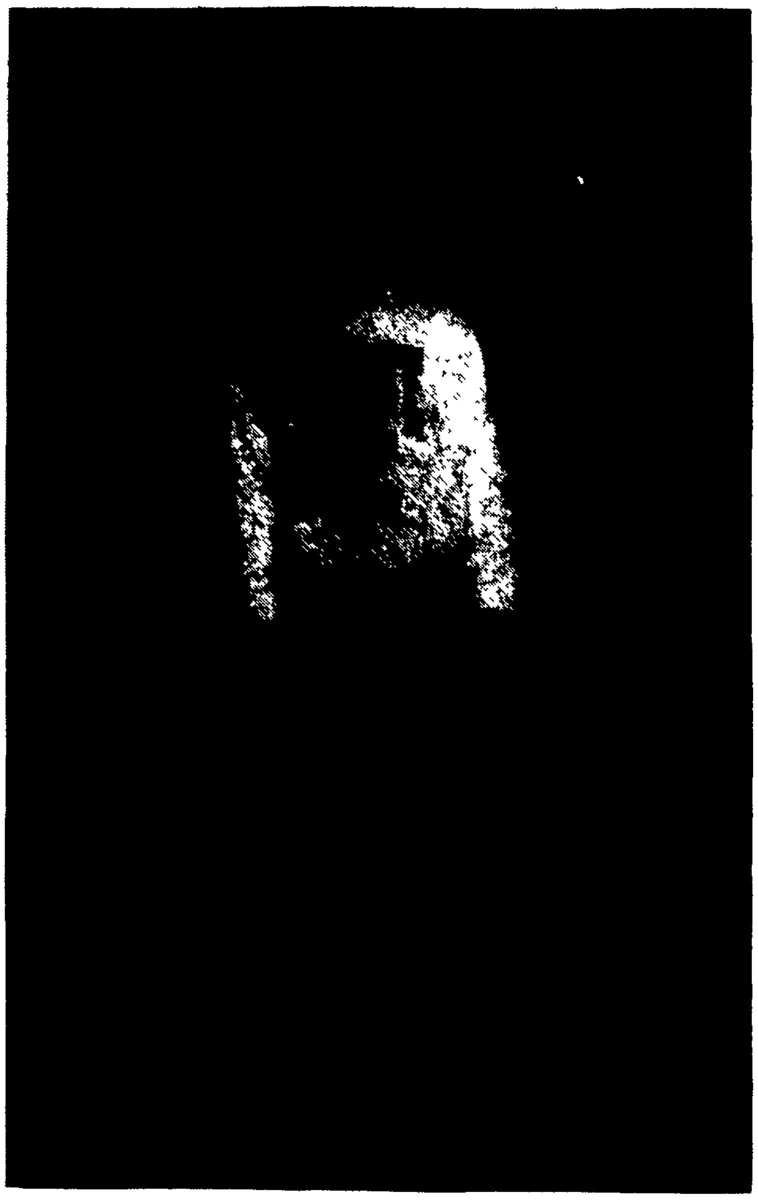
Bedford Selects Two Outstanding 4-H'ers



Jeff Yoder takes a few minutes to pose for a photo. He was named Outstanding 4-H Boy of Bedford County.

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Two youths have been selected as outstanding 4-H members in Bedford County.

Presented with an award at a recent 4-H recognition banquet, Julie Harclerode, was named "Outstanding 4-H Girl".

The daughter of Connie and Robert Harclerode, Julie is a senior at Bedford High School.

Her main work in 4-H has been with the "Bedford Barkers," where she is the junior leader.

Spurred on by her grandmother, Julie began training dogs several years ago. She trained both of her own two mixed breeds and also trained her grandmother's dog.

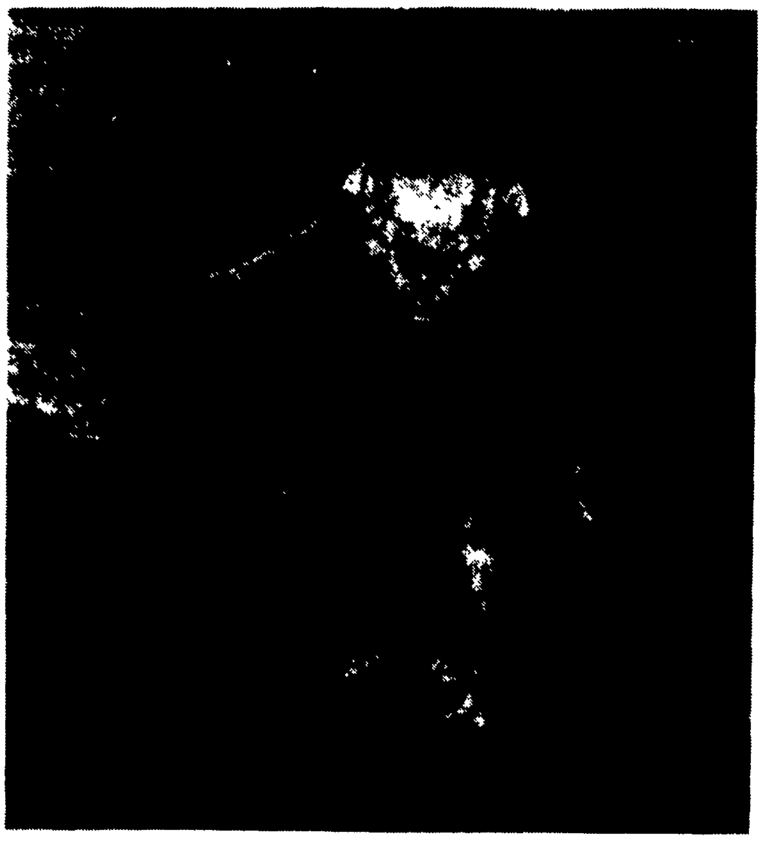
She has helped numerous other 4-H members to train their own pets.

Julie has also participated in a 4-H exchange program, spending two weeks last summer in Monterey, Mexico. Mexican 4-H members also spent some time at her home. Julie will visit Wisconsin this summer to help with that exchange program.

Some of her 4-H projects have included visiting nursing homes with pets, helping with Bedford Hospital Day, and working as a volunteer at Fall Foliage.

At school, this tall, trim teen is active in band, track, and ski club. She plans to attend college where she will probably major in biology.

"She's always ready to volunteer and always there when needed," declared the 4-H Extension office.



Julie Harclerode demonstrates the work she has done with her two mixed breed dogs.

Named outstanding 4-H Boy was Jeffrey Yoder, son of Jane Yoder, Osterburg RD 1.

Jeff was dealt a cruel blow last summer when his father was killed in a freak silo accident.

Jeff's mother found it necessary to sell off all of the family's dairy animals.

Prior to this year, Jeff had helped with the 4-H milkshake booth and showed dairy cattle at the Morrison's Cove Dairy Show, the Bedford Fair, the District 4-H Dairy Show, and the State 4-H Dairy Show.

When he had no animals to show, Jeff didn't just sit back and sulk. Instead, he picked up the pieces and helped friends show their animals.

A member of the Southern Cove 4-H Club, Jeff is a ninth grader at Chestnut Ridge High School.

Lancaster Society 14

Farm Women Society members met on October 14 at Dorothy Musser's home on Wheatland School Road. Hostesses were Ruth Combs, Anna Marie Groff, and Eileen McComas. The agenda included roll call, a skit by Rhoda Landis and Donna Coleman, music by a special group, and "My Life's Story" by Miriam Groff, Eileen McComas and Helen Breneman. Safety and health tips were given by Elma Barge.

On November 19, at the Sight and Sound Entertainment Center, 14 members enjoyed the program "The Joys of Christmas." It was a good program; it was a true Christmas message of the birth of Christ.

On December 8 members met at the home of Donna Coleman, which was beautifully decorated for the Christmas season. Hostesses Marion Rohrer, Irma Brubaker and Mary Louise Landis, served refreshments. Donna had a tree for socks and mittens which were given to Christ's Home. Members sang carols and hymns and played games. Members played "now-you-have-it, now-you-don't" for the gift exchange, sang the theme song, prayed the Lord's Prayer, and left to meet again in 1994.

Out Of School, Into The Show Ring

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

GRANVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — There are lots of reasons Jeremy and Matthew Fisher enter their sheep in Farm Show competition each year, including the typical teen-age one — to get out of school.

But to them the Farm Show offers a different kind of show ring experience, and these two youth enter the small arena with more than a sheep project — they also have with them what they learned locally at the Mifflin County Youth Fair.

No matter where the competition takes place, there are always benefits and rewards earned and lessons learned.

"You learn what the judges are looking for," 15-year-old Matt comments about his carcass lamb evaluation. According to 17-year-old Jeremy, they're looking for "not a lot of fat, a lean, trim animal but meaty, and a large loin." Lambs are evaluated on-foot for quality and yield grade, fat thickness, and ribeye area measurements. Jeremy equates it with being an amateur butcher, estimating the carcass quality. Last year, Jeremy took first place in his class and Matt took second in his.

Both boys take animals from their own ewes and need to judge early on which animals to take. Matt owns two Southdowns and two Suffolks. Jeremy own four Suffolk. They house their sheep on their parents' 10 acres.

Wedesday's junior market lamb class rewards those who have managed and fed their lambs properly for rate of gain. Jeremy said he uses his showmanship skills to present his lambs to the judge in the best possible way.

Matt shows his Southdown on Sunday, January 9. Their parents, Tim and Vale Fisher, both show in the open show Dorset class. Vale's black Dorset must be registered as a natural. "Anything not white is called natural," she said.

Both Jeremy and Matthew began showing at the Farm Shhow in 1988 and have won several first place premiums. Placing in the top half of their classes enables their market animals to participate in the Junior Livestock Auction which takes place on Thursday beginning at 1 p.m.

After the sale, both teens go home for one other important lesson — balancing the books. "You learn how to manage money," Jeremy siad. "I get my check from the sale and a chunk of it goes right out for a feed bill."

When the Fisher brothers first started showing at the Farm Show, few others from Mifflin County chose to participate. But that's changing. This year there will be seven Mifflin County lambs showing at the Farm Show.

Matt Fisher, 15, back, and his brother Jeremy, 17, front, check through their ribbons — there are too many to remember who won what and when.

Jeremy and Matt have, in their six years at the Farm Show, learned to appreciate those form other backgrounds who also show sheep. "There's kids from an inner city Philadelphia school who raise an animal and show it. The money from selling ti goes back to the school for the next year's program," Jeremy said.

While not attending the sheep, Matt and Jeremy visit the Pennsylvania State Beekeepers Association's honey booth. Their grandfather, Merle Fisher, manages the booth and doles out the honey-sweetened ice cream — butter pecan and strawberry, to mention a few.

Getting out of school is an added plus for some attending the Farm Show. But anyone attending can expect the learning to continue, whether it's in the show ring or, out.

NEW ENTERPRISE (Bedford Co.) — A feeling of deja vu must overcome Berneta Snider Gable as she loads her Guernseys on the truck for their trip to the Pennsylvania Farm Show. This year marks the 35th year that Sniders have participated in this big event.

"I wasn't in that first one myself," Berneta is quick to point out. "I wasn't old enough. But my grandfather, my dad, and my brothers Birch and Tweet both were."

Berneta and her husband Brad purchased the Snider farm in 1991. Included among the 205 head of milk cows are various 4-H projects belonging to the Gable's two children and Berneta's nieces and nephews. Berneta oversees the milking of 100 cows on the 310-acre farm.

This year, the Farm Show roll call will include Kendy, with a junior Guernsey calf and Aaron with a yearling heifer and a 5-year-old cow which captured the state grand champion Guernsey award in 1993.

Jan and Kristie Snider will show a junior calf, dry cow, and an intermediate calf.

Amber Clark will be showing a senior calf and a 3-year-old.

Berneta herself will show a summer and junior yearling, a 2-year-old, 3-year-old, 4-year-old, and an aged cow.

While most of their numerous ribbons and trophies are captured in the Guernsey classes, Berneta does not limit the Snider Farm to one bread of dairy cattle.

"We have 30 head of Holsteins and three Jerseys," she said.

The Holsteins occurred when Berneta's brother was helping with the farm and wanted to add a few. "We loked them and have no misgivings about including them in the herd," she said.

The Jerseys were a gift to daughter, Kendy, who has captured a number of first place awards at local dairy shows with them. "They were owned by a man who could no longer milk them," Berneta said. "He offered them to Kendy and I gave in. Again, I have no qualms about them. They've been a good addition to the herd."

Bordon's slogan of milk from contented cows might have originated on the Snider Farm. The cows are clean and well fed. As Berneta walks by, they thrust their heads upward for an expected pat. A fluffy St. Bernard keeps pace with his master and fat, clean cats purr contentedly on bales of straw.

One of the Gable's best conversation pieces is a huge Guernsey cow weighing no less than a ton. With two chains hooked together, circling her large neck, the docile cow rises to her feet as Berneta approaches. "We have no idea what caused her to get so large," Berneta said of the 8-year-old cow. "It was just a freak of nature."

Her husband points out the various opinions judges have had about the big cow. "We used to show her," he said. "And we always got rated very high because she was so big or very low because she was too big. It was all someone's opinion."

The Gables have no idea how they will do at this year's Farm Show. "We usually do well," Bernetta said. "And we have no reason to expect otherwise this year."

A sad moment will come when they return home. Berneta's father, Bernard Snider, died this past June. "He was our greatest fan," she said. "When we came through the door the telephone would be ringing and it would be Dad wondering how we did."

Project To Test Organically Enhanced Fertilizer

DOVER, Del. — Delmarva's billion-dollar poultry industry produces more than broilers. One by-product is poultry manure, a rich souce of nitrogen fertilizer and a potential money-maker if companies can develop a market for this project.

The universities of Delaware and Maryland are involved in a project with a compnay that hopes to develop a pelletized fertilizer that incorporates poultry manure.

A four-year demonstration project has been launched on an Eastern Shore, Md., farm to test the product. Delaware extension poultry specialist Dan Palmer, agronomy specialist Richard Taylor, and Experiment Station poultry scientist Bud Malone are working with Maryland's agriucltural engineer Lew Carr and nutrient management consultant Joe Kaufman ont he demonstra. Corn treated with commercial fertilizer will be grown next to corn plots treated with the organically enhanced fertilizer.

The company, Crop Production Services, will supply both commercial and organically enhanced fertilizers for the demonstration. Palmer hopes that the organically enhanced fertilizer will be a success.

"We're testing a product that could use excess poultry manure from the Eastern SHore on agronomic crops," he said. "The pelletized material is 50 percent commercial fertilizer and 50 percent manure."

Palmer explains that the commercial fertilizer addition spikes the nitrogen-phosphorus-potassium (NPK) levels of the pellets, while the organic matter in the manure, lowers leachability and volatilization of nitrogen over time.

"The advantage of using the manure is the organic component that will increase over time," Palmer said. "We need to run the experiment for a minimum of four years to see the full benefits, both for the land and for the crop."

Gehl Introduces Pull-Type Mower-Conditioner

WEST BEND, Wis. — Gehl's new nine-foot sicklebar mower conditioner is built for fast cutting, fast drying, and worry-free performance.

The new model 2175 features a simple pivot-arm knife drive for high-speed cutting.

"The sickle drive is powered off the lower conditioner roll, so you get 'flywheel-type' momentum for extra cutting energy when you need it," said Jim Phillips, Gehl hay tool product manager. "The entire drive system consists of one gearbox, two belts and two chains. It's extremely simple for fewer adjustments and less maintenance costs."

Gehl's new nine-foot sicklebar mower conditioner is built for fast cutting, fast drying, and worry-free performance.

The new model 2175 features a simple pivot-arm knife drive for high-speed cutting.

Precision-made 109-inch, machined rubber intermeshing conditioning rolls gently crack stems for faster dry-down. According to Phillips, "The durable rolls are machined so exact dimensions can be maintained across the full width."

A single lever adjusts the forming chamber to create fluffy windrows or full-width swaths. a proven three-point flotation system responds quickly to ground variances to maintain an even cut.

Deere Campaign Reaches Millions

MOLINE, Ill. — A Deere & Company newspaper campaign that provides positive messages about farmers and U.S. agriculture has reached an estimated 18 to 36 million American consumers.

A little less than a year ago, Deere began releasing the series of six brief, illustrated articles called Farm Focus. Now, with the last article to be published and clippings continuing to stream in from earlier releases, more than nine million households, businesses, and organizations have already received newspapers with these positive messages about farmers and agriculture.

The program began when Deere research revealed that farmers are increasingly concerned about how agriculture is perceived by consumers. Representing only two percent of the population, farmers see support for farm programs dwindling and some consumers expressing concern about food safety. During the research, farmers told Deere they want companies they do business with to help inform consumers about American agriculture.

The series of news articles accompanied by charts and graphs became a key part of Deere's response. Each article and its illustrating graph described one or more facts about the productivity and efficiency of farmers and how that benefits individual consumers and the economy in general.

For example, one article explained how outstanding agricultural productivity allows U.S farmers to produce enough product that 25 percent of their income is earned from foreign consumers rather than U.S.consumers. Plus, the agricultural export industry creates more tha one million U.S jobs.

Another article told consumers that more than 130,000 U.S. farms are operated by women. It also says most U.S. farms are family farms, and on those farms, women play an important management role. Often women are in complete charge of one or more portions of the family farm business.

One more example is the article that described how U.S. farmers aren't always the world yield-per-acre champs, but they're usually the best at lowest labor and input cost per bushel, pound, or bale. That's a major reason why U.S. consumers enjoy the lowest food-cost-to-income ratio of any nation.

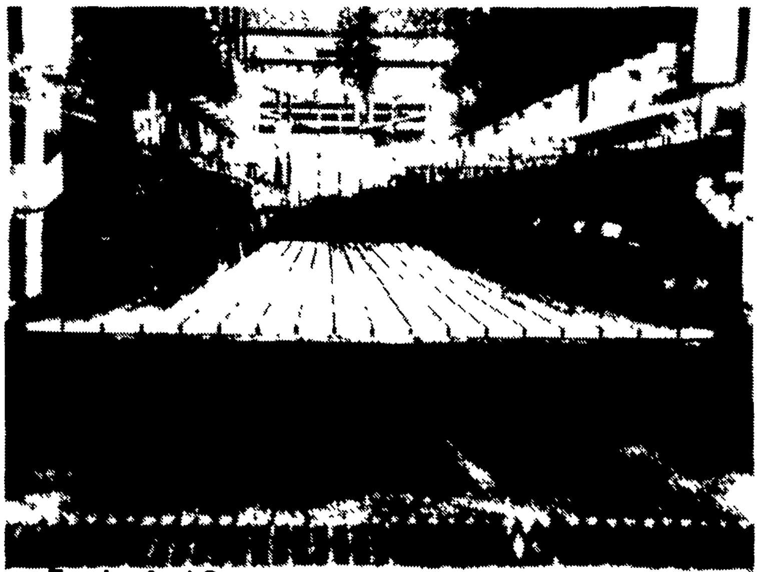
MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK™



Empire Agri-Systems, Inc. of Auburn, N.Y. has designed a parlor pit floor that will adjust up or dowm to meet each milkers' desired working height.

A milker 6 feet 2 inches tall or 5 feet 6 inches tall can each work the same parlor with equal comfort.

Parlor Pit Floor Adjusts Up Or Down

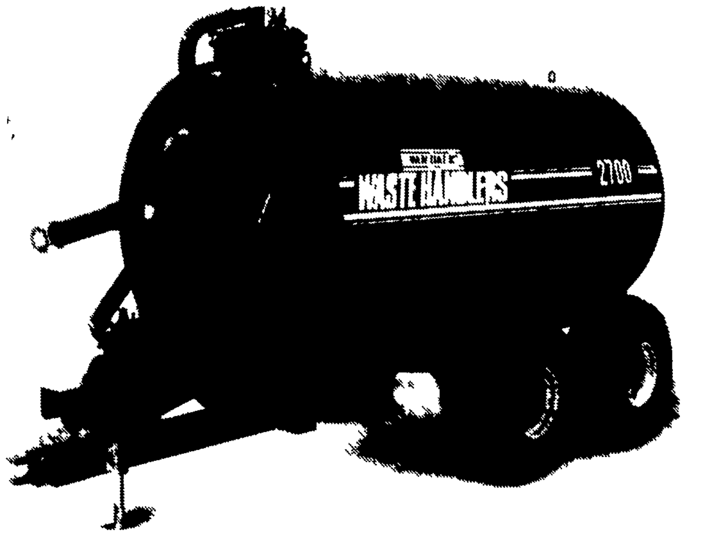
AUBURN, N.Y. — The Empire Lift Deck is a new approach to an age-old problem — worker comfort.

Today's larger herd sizes mean more hours spent in the milking parlor than ever before. Empire Agri-Systems, Inc. has designed a parlor pit floor that will adjust up or down to meet each milkers' desired working height.

A milker 6 feet 2 inches tall or 5 feet 6 inches tall can each work the same parlor with equal comfort.

The Empire Lift Deck is made of special PVC planking with a non-skid surface, supported by a galvanized steel frame, and raised up and down via a stainless steel cable suspension and linear actuator drive system. The cushion-like flexibility, non-skid surface of the PVC decking offers increased worker comfort that leads to higher productivity demanded by today's larger dairy farms.

The new PVC decking offers a non corrosive, easy to clean surface and eliminates the need for heavy rubber mats.



Equipped with quality Jurop pumps, Van Dale Vacuum Tanks load in three minutes or less through a 4-inch or 6-inch brass side fill valve. Pumps are available with 540 or 1,000 R.P.M. PTO and feature precision-machined cast iron components and a continuous, automatic oiling system.

Waste Handlers Introduces Vacuum Tanks

FORT ATKINSON, Wis. — Van Dale Waste Handlers offers a new line of liquid manure vacuum tanks.

Equipped with quality Jurop pumps, Van Dale vacuum tanks load in three minutes or less through a 4-inch or 6-inch brass side fill valve. Bauer hose-coupling fittings and a neoprene fill hose are heavy-duty to withstand years of use.

Pumps are available with 540 or 1,000 R.P.M. PTO and feature precision-machined cast iron components and a continuous, automatic oiling system. An optional hydraulic motor can be installed when no PTO is available or when one is not desired.

All Van Dale Vacuum Tanks feature an easy-to-read fill level indicator that shows liquid level when filling spreading, or injecting. A large, 20-inch dome hatch provides easy inspection access to the tank. A positive shutoff float inside the tank dome and a secondary shutoff trap outside the tank prevent liquid from contaminating the pump. Relief valves keep vacuum and pressure within safe pumping levels.

A hydraulically operated rear brass valve unloads manure in a controlled 180° arc, producing a low, uniform spread pattern up to 30-foot wide. Van Dale's exclusive rear splash plate adjusts for light to heavy applications.

FFA Names Proficiency Winner

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Twelve years ago, J. Gross Dinsmore of West Finley, Pa., gave five orphan lambs to his 6-year-old grandson, who lived in Jefferson, Md. At that time he had no idea the impact those lambs would have on the future of that young man.'

Last month Robert O. Dinsmore was named the National FFA proficiency winner in sheep production at the 66th National FFA Convention in Kansas City. That honor is only one of many 4-H and FFA awards Robert has won with his sheep production enterprise.

In 1982, Robert's parents, Bob and Charlotte Dinsmore, helped him purchase 12 Hampshire breeding ewes and a ram. Robert has always done the work and made the management decisions that led to the increase of his flock to the 110 registered Hampshire and Shropshire ewes he will be lambing out this winter.

When Robert was old enough, he enrolled in 4-H and began making a name for himself showing and selling his homebred show wethers and breeding sheep. His trophy case filled up and his college fund grew as a result of showing and lambing barn successes.

Robert is quick to give his 4-H leaders and livestock judging coaches credit for teaching him about sheep production. Robert capped his 4-H career by winning one of the three National Scholarships awarded in the sheep project area at the 1992 National 4-H Congress in Chicago. This year, Robert was a member of the Maryland State 4-H Livestock Judging Team.

Ironically, Robert almost missed the FFA experience because his 9th grade guidance counselor advised him not to mix agriculture courses with his academic classes. By his sophomore year he and his parents insisted that his schedule could include both. "That was probably the best decision I made in high school," the Frederick Community College student said.

At Brunswick High School, Robert represented his chapter in livestock and meats judging contests as well as the regional ag business management contest. In 1993, Robert was named Brunswick Chapter Star Farmer, Maryland State Star Farmer, and Eastern Region Star Farmer.

The FFA program teaches the kind of financial recordkeeping that is essential in business. Robert is convinced that the skills he learned in FFA built on the ones he had already acquired through 4-H. Robert confirms that "both programs were important in putting me where I am today." He believes the business and producer groups that support youth ag programs are to be commended for the incentive they offer young people to stay in touch with agriculture.

As the national proficiency winner in sheep production, Robert received scholarship money and a European trip with the winners of the other 28 proficiency award area. The American Sheep Industry Association and Kent Feeds, Inc. sponsor the Sheep Production Proficiency Award.

MAXIMUM FEED QUALITY

To ensure maximum feed quality from maize it is vital to crack every kernel. Digestion of uncracked maize falls as the maize becomes drier. Independent trials have shown the Claas corn cracker to be close to 100% effective From the cylinder the corn passes through the two large diameter rollers with saw tooth profiles The rollers run at different speeds to intensify the grinding effect and open up each kernel It is a fairly tough process so the latest generation of corn crackers take account of the wear involved on the rollers. Nothing can reduce the wear but Claas have cut the cost of repair by making the outer sleeve replaceable The shaft, drive pulley and bearings can all be reused which cuts down repair bills dramatically. Adjusting the distance between the two rollers is accomplished by turning two handles, easily accessible behind the cab. In no time at all the degree of cracking can be matched to the ripeness of the crop

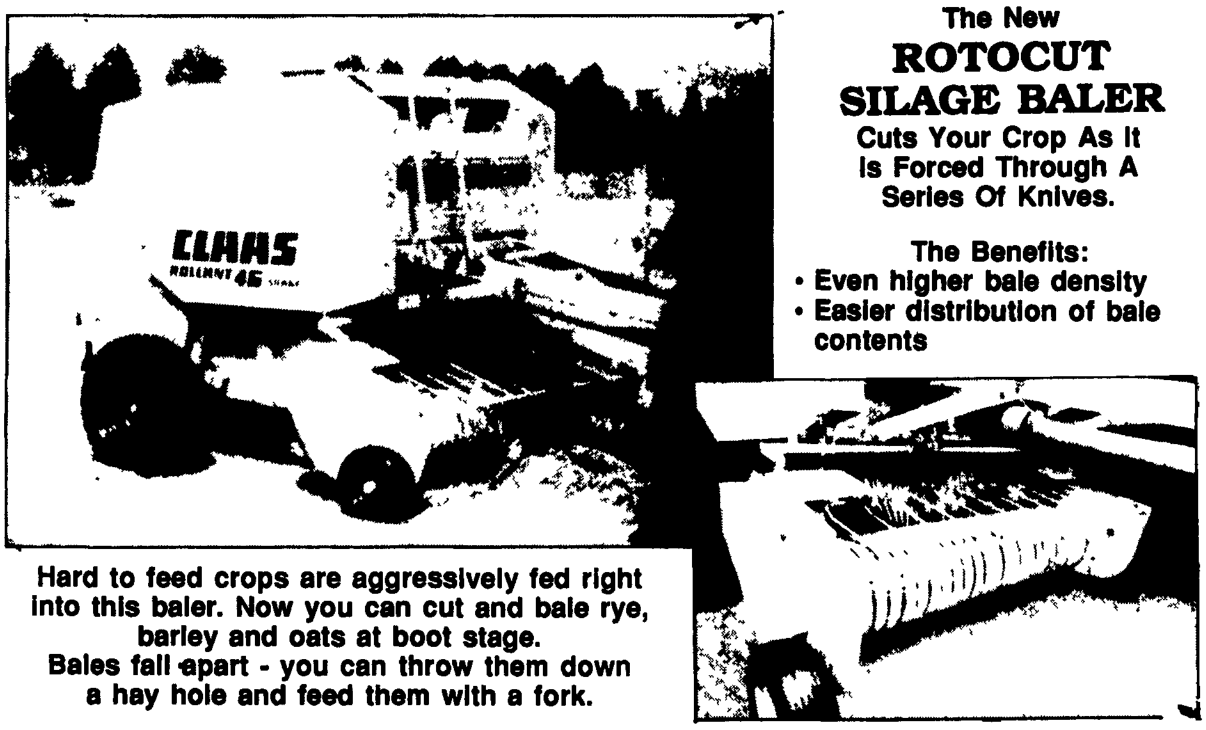
RELIABILITY

The CLAAS Cutterbox is a unique balanced design using 2 knives in a V configuration. This forces the cutting action toward the center instead of the outside. This is the secret of their horsepower requirement and good quality of cut.



Hard to feed crops are aggressively fed right into this baler. Now you can cut and bale rye, barley and oats at boot stage.
Bales fall apart - you can throw them down a hay hole and feed them with a fork.

The New

ROTOCUT SILAGE BALER

Cuts Your Crop As It Is Forced Through A Series Of Knives.

The Benefits:

- Even higher bale density
- Easier distribution of bale contents

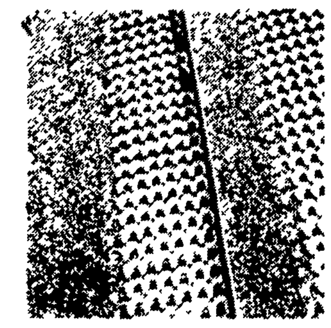
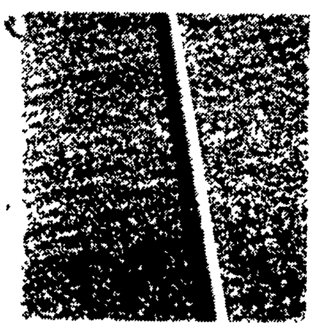
MASSEY FERGUSON

COMBINING SLOPES — THE MF 3-D CLEANING SYSTEM



Normal cleaning across slopes



3-D in operation

With the MF 3-D system you can operate at the same speed on slopes as on flat land. Daily performance can be maintained.

The 3-D cleaning system provides dynamic slope compensation which means that the upper sieve moves sideways against the slope of the hill. The degree and direction of these movements depend on the inclination of the slope. Quick reaction and of course equal performance in any direction on slopes of up to 20%.

With the MF-3-D cleaning system, the crop is distributed evenly across the full width of the sieves, performance remains stable and output maintained.

EXCLUSIVE BENEFITS BY DESIGN

What do we say when our customers ask us for the best farm tire we have? (After all, by now he has tried Goodyear, Firestone, Armstrong...). We have a new answer to that old question: Kleber (Pronounced Claybear) Here's why Kleber, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Michelin Tire Corporation has been making radial farm tires since 1952. In Europe (which is 85% radial), Kleber is number one and michelin is number two in both original equipment and replacement farm tires The immediate benefits farmers will have are:

1 Tremendous traction-after all, Kleber is a minimum of 28% deeper in non-skid. For example, a Kleber 18.4R38 is 64/32nds vs. 51/32nds on any commodity radial made in the U.S.

2. The exclusively patented innerlug system accelerates cleanout, reduced downtime and supplements traction.

3. The unique carcass and belt configuration allows directional stability on the highway even with center hitch equipment. After all, Kleber is designed for road use. It is, in fact, speed rated at 25 mph.

4 And last, in addition to the normal benefits of radials, Kleber's wear is so extended that we have product on main tractor application with ten years of service in 8,000 hours.

WHY KLEBER RADIAL FARM TIRES?

- Lowest Cost per hour
- Highest traction - wet or dry
- Quietest highway transport
- Smoothest ride - no bounce
- Greatest fuel economy
- Most stable center hitch haul
- Lowest uniform soil compaction
- Fastest wet soil clean out

WHAT ARE THE UNIQUE FEATURES THAT MAKE KLEBER HEAD AND SHOULDER ABOVE THE COMPETITION?

- Dual angle bead configuration to insure no slip rim grip
- Bead/sidewall/belt package that provides on/off highway stability
- Non-stretch belts that reinforce the premium bar depth while protecting the radial carcass from field hazards
- Advanced R-1W bar depth to provide extra traction and low cost/hour usage
- Non-stretch belt/carcass design to minimize soil compaction, eliminate pressure spikes and provide uniform wear pattern
- Total design/build techniques to insure stable no bounce ride with center hitch equipment at 45 KPH
- Noise/vibration engineering to optimize bar contour/spacing
- Close technical ties to all tractor manufacturers in the Western World insuring compatibility
- Extensive front wheel assist OE/replacement knowledge world-wide
- In-house research - development staff

CLAAS® Rollant round balers give you what you want

—one quality round bale after another.

Discover Quality...Discover Value...

The Rollant 66 makes fast work of 4'x5' bales. Its unique two-stage pick-up and close tines produce a clean, efficient harvest in less time. Rollatex netting wraps a bale in 10 seconds or less, and double-twine wraps it up in just 20.

The Rollant 46 introduced CLAAS's innovative fixed bale chamber to the marketplace. This versatile baler handles all farm operations from dry hay to silage. Nobody produces a better 4'x4' bale.

The Rollant 42 was designed for family livestock operations. This economical investment produces weather-tight 4'x4' bales for the highest nutrient content possible.

CLAAS bales mean nutrient-filled edible hay, low spoilage, and high crude protein retention.

Each Rollant offers the innovative chamber, low-profile pick-up, and world class dependability. And they all share CLAAS's international reputation for low maintenance, durability and long-life.

Butter Sculpture Salutes Football

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Two football players, one from Penn State University and the other from University of Tennessee, will be the centerpiece of the fourth annual Farm Show butter sculpture. The sculpture will salute football to recognize the first professional football game played in Pittsburgh in November 1892.

Pennsylvania is a state full of gridiron teams — from high school to professional — and has generated plenty of history for the sport. The Florida Citrus Bowl featuring Penn State and Tennessee was selected for the sculpture becasue of Penn State's notoriety in the state and contribution to football's legacy. The dairy industry has also worked with Penn State to promote milk during all Penn State football games. The sculpture's theme. "Tackle Your Thirst With Milk," will emphasize that milk and football are perfect compliments.

Raymond Mackintosh from Ontario, Canada, will return for a fourth year to prepare the sculpture for Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners. The partners — American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid East UDIA/F.O. 36 Advertising and Promotion Agency, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program — jointly sponsor the sculpture as well as other activities at the Farm Show.

One of a few known butter sculptures in the world, Mackintosh is also known for his work on popular movies and features. He has just completed work on "Legends of the Fall," an epic family saga starring Anthony Hopkins, and "Natural Born Killers," a movie directed by Oliver Stone. For both movies, Mackintosh performed a variety of prop work. He has also been working on television programs including a "Robocop" series to be released in the spring and a CBC World War II documentary.

Eastern Milk Producers, from Syracuse, New York, will donate approximately 800 pounds of butter for use in the sculpture. The butter will come from the Holly Milk Plant, in Carlisle, which receives milk from Eastern's 1,200 Pennsylvania members. In addition to the donation, Easterm will assist in the development of a video about the butter sculpture. This video will be aired during the Farm Show at the butter sculpture and will provide information about the creation of the sculpture and the football theme.

The sculpture is made on a medal framework and designed by various carving tools. Because Mackintosh does not touch the butter with his hands, most of the sculpture can be used following the Farm Show. Several area charities will receive the butter to use in their soup kitchens.

The butter sculpture was unveiled Thursday, January 6, prior to the show, at a special press conference. More information about the sculpture is available by calling (717) 787-6903.

ASI Announces Award Winners

DENVER, Colo. — Five people from across the nation have been selected for their outstanding contributions to the sheep industry by the American Sheep Industry Association.

Award recipients include Tom Settlemire, Brunswick, Maine, Flock Guardian Award; Dr. Clair Engle, University Park, Pa., Camptender Award; and Olin Henry Timm, Dixon, Calif., McClure Silver Ram Award.

The two recipients of ASI's Shepherd's Voice awards — one for print news, the other for broadcast — include Susanne Richards of the Maryland-based newspaper, Delmarva Farmer and David L. Russell, Indianapolis, Ind., of the Tribune Radio Networks.

All of the recipients will be honored at the 1994 American Sheep Industry Convention Jan. 18-22 in Reno, Nev.

Settlemire was chosen for the Flock Guardian Award because of his substantial contributions in resource management to the American sheep industry. Settlemire, who is professor of biochemistry at Bowdoin College, currently is director for his district of the National Rambouillet Association, serves as past president of the Maine Sheep Breeders Association, is director for the Maine State Scrapie Board, and is serving his sixth year as chairman for the Spirit of Maine Ram Test Committee. He also was instrumental in spearheading rotational grazing in his area, introducing the use of brassicas to extend the grazing season, and using native-grown grain and cull beans to cup expenses and increase feed efficiency.

Olin Henry Timm was chosen for the McClure Silver Ram Award because of his lifetime accomplishments that have positioned him as an industry leader. In addition to being a commercial sheep producer and lamb feeder, Timm served as chairman for the California Wool Growers Association, chaired its Animal Health Committee from 1966 to present, and served on its Board of Directors from 1941 to present. Timm also is a past president of the U.S. Animal Health Association, and is a past member of the USDA's Foreign Animal Health Committee as well as ASI's Animal Health Committee.

Dr. Clair Engle won the Camptender Award, presented to a person who is not directly involved in sheep production but has served the industry in a related capacity. Engle, who is a sheep specialist in the Department of Animal Science at Penn State University, is active in many extension education programs and is a regular featured speaker at sheep symposiums, show and sales, statewide youth programs, field days, and management workshops. He also is a frequent contributing writer to many livestock and farm publications. Engle is the driving force behind the "Blueprint for Expansion Program" of the Pennsylvania sheep industry, designed to give renewed impetus to the sheep industry.

The Delmarva Farmer, under Senior Editor Bruce Hotckiss, is one of two recipients for ASI's Media Award. The paper has served as the voice of agriculture for farmers on the Delmarva Peninsula and surrounding areas since 1978, and Hotckiss has been there since the start. With 12,000 paid subscribers and an estimated 40,000 readers, the scope of this newspaper is far-reaching. The paper publishes a biweekly column on sheep and wool production and often features ASI news releases. It also covers all significant events that occur in the Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia sheep industries. Hotckiss' editorials on the sheep industry are regarded as timely, thought-provoking, and entertaining. The award will be accepted by Susanne Richards, who has been handling the newspaper's sheep coverage for approximately one year.

David Russell received the second Shepherd's Voice Media Award for his work at Tribune Radio Networks. Russell serves as associate farm service director for the network where he has worked since 1988. He previously worked for Indiana Farm Bureau for two years and WOWO Radio for five years. Russell was chosen for his willingness to work with the Indiana Sheep Breeders Association and ASI to deliver stories of importance to sheep producers. He especially is noted for his positive features on the National Wool Act through his interviews with local producers and national leaders. Russell's up-to-date stories are broadcast to more than 32 Indiana radio stations.

ACP Funding

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Funding for Pennsylvania's 1994 Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) will total $2,5 million, according to County Committee chairman Richard Troutman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Berks County's 1994 ACP allocation is $56,000 for annual conservation agreements, Troutman said.

ACP funds will be used to control erosion, conserve water, and improve water quality, he said.

ASCS approved 105 ACP applications in 1993 to treat critical soil and water conservation problems on 902 acres in Berks County.

The conservation program is designed to encourage farmers to voluntarily perform soil and water conservation measures.

"We identify critical conservation problems in the county, determine priorities for cost-sharing to obtain the most cost effective solutions to the problems, and select ACP practices for the county program," Troutman said.

Applications for three to five year long term agreements are being taken now for funding early in 1994. Farmers may apply for the ACP anytime during the year.

'Dairy Fun Night' Creates Family Fun

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Families attending the Pennsylvania Farm Show should include "Dairy Fun Night" on their schedule.

This evening of fun with the dairy industry held Tuesday, January 11, 1994, in the Small Arena of the Farm Show Complex, promises to entertain and enthuse all family members.

The evening kicks off with a homemade ice cream making contest, the "Churn-Off." Tasty entries include "Pauline's Raspberry Pudding" ice cream, "Apple Cinnamon" ice cream, and "Cookies and Cream" ice cream. Eight entries will compete for three cash prizes in this contest: $300 first; $150 second; and $125 third.

While churners make their creations, a "Dairy Obstacle Contest" will entertain the crowd. Teams of three will participate in several activities — bale stacking, "cowpie" dodging, and milk pouring. All teams will be judged on the time they need to complete each area of the contest. They will also be judged on the quality of their hay stack, their ability to miss "cowpies," and the amount of milk they can successfully pour into bottles.

Teams will compete in one of three age categories, 12 and under, 13 to 19, and adults. First, $75, and second, $50, place prizes will be awarded in each age group.

The second annual "Dairy Feud" will follow, with celebrities competing in this popular game show. Using a dairy theme, participants will answer questions such as "What is the first thing a dairy farmer does when he enters the barn?" and "What is a nutrient you would find in milk?" Teams will win points based upon survey responses. The host of the show will verify participants' answers with the familiar phrase, "and the survey says?"

Before the "Churn-Off" winners are announced, youngsters and older folks will be able to enter the "milk mustache" contest. Each participant will be given a cup of milk to create the best "milk mustache." The winner will receive a milk promotion sweatshirt and the "milk mustache" award. All participants will receive consolation prizes.

The evening will conclude with a celebrity cow milking and butter making contest. Celebrity teams of two will participate in this event. The first team member will actually milk a cow by hand and the second member will shake the milk to make butter. The winner will be selected on a time basis — the first team to make butter will win the contest. Previous contests have provided plenty of competitive entertainment, so everyone should plan to attend to cheer for their favorite celebrities.

The "Fun Night" was created to celebrate the state's leading agricultural industry. The dairy industry annually generates $1.4 billion dollars for the state's economy. "Dairy Fun Night" is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and the Department of Agriculture.

More information is available by contacting Pennsylvania Dairy at (717) 787-6903.

FACTS ABOUT LARYNGOTRACHEITIS FOR PENNSYLVANIA PRODUCERS

Patty Dunn, DVM
Animal Diagnostic Lab
Department of Veterinary Science

Wintertime has come to Pennsylvania, and with it the threat of increased poultry health problems, especially those involving respiratory diseases.

One economically important respiratory disease of chickens, infectious laryngotracheitis, or "LT," is on the rise in the poultry-dense areas of southeastern and southcentral Pennsylvania.

Layer pullets and broilers have been involved in this recent outbreak. To follow are some answers to commonly asked questions about this potentially devastating disease that explain the behavior of the disease and strategies for its prevention and control.

What Causes LT?

A highly contagious herpes virus known as infectious laryngotracheitis virus is the agent that causes LT. The LT virus infects the upper respiratory tract (sinus, larynx, and trachea), and also the conjunctiva, or inner lining of the eyelid and eye.

LT virus, like other herpes viruses, has the property of "latency," which is the ability to remain hidden in the bird after it recovers from clinical disease or other exposure to the virus. Because of this property, recovered chickens can become "carriers" of the virus and shed it unpredictably, often during periods of stress. Thus, these birds become virus reservoirs capable of infecting any susceptible birds that may come in contact with the carriers.

LT virus is fairly sensitive to heat and drying when compared to other viruses and bacteria. For this reason, LT is much less common in warm summer months.

How Does LT Spread?

Once introduced into a poultry flock, the virus spreads rapidly between birds by direct or indirect contact with respiratory secretions from the mouth, nose, and eyes.

Acutely infected birds can disperse virus into the air and onto surfaces (floors, feeders, and waterers) for flock mates to contact. The LT virus is most often carried to other flocks on the same farm or to different premises directly or indirectly by people. Infectious viral particles can be carried on shoes and clothing, contaminated equipment, litter, and trucks or other vehicles.

There is evidence that LT virus may be carried short distances by droplets in the air. A complicating factor to the spread of LT is that infected birds begin to shed virus before clinical signs are first seen. For this reason, people traffic from a seemingly healthy flock that is in the early stages of infection can spread virus to other birds before extra precautions are taken.

What Types Of Poultry Can Get The Disease?

Chickens, pheasants, and partridge are susceptible to development of clinical LT. Most cases involve chickens of all production types. Young chicks less than 2 to 3 weeks of age are resistant to the disease.

The severity of LT seems to increase as the age of the bird increases. As is the case in most respiratory diseases, growing males tend to develop more severe signs and have higher mortality than females.

What Are The Clinical Symptoms Seen In Poultry With This Disease?

Clinical signs are generally confined to the upper respiratory tract and include foamy, swollen eyes, snicking, coughing, shaking of heads, and difficult breathing (wheezing). In severe cases, open-mouth breathing and expulsion of blood or bloody casts from the trachea may be seen.

Sudden deaths often occur and mortality can range from less than 5 percent to 70 percent. In breeding or laying flocks, egg production can drop 10-20 percent or more.

Clinical signs can range greatly in severity. Determinants of severity include the virulence of the virus strain, the age, breed and sex of the chicken, and environmental conditions in the house.

How Is LT Diagnosed?

Upper respiratory tissues, especially the tracheas, must be sampled and examined microscopically in order for a diagnosis of LT to be made. Therefore, it is important to use the veterinary diagnostic laboratory in your area.

Take sick and recently dead birds as samples, and remember to contain them properly in order to prevent any potential spread of disease during transport. The pathologist will look for lesions typical for LT infection. These include reddened lining of the larynx and trachea, blood, excessive mucus or necrotic debris in the trachea, and inflamed conjunctiva.

Tissues will be examined microscopically for structures known as viral inclusion bodies that can be seen in some infected cells. Tissues will also be processed for virus isolation to confirm the diagnosis.

LT is a reportable disease in Pennsylvania, and diagnosed cases will be reported to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Animal Industry so that appropriate tracking and control procedures may be put in place. The epidemiologic information obtained is important in confining the outbreak to as small an area as possible.

How Is LT Treated?

Because LT is a viral disease,

Tough Tillers For A Tough Job!

The Kuhn Power Tillers are "user engineered" for better soil management and bigger yields.

- DURABLE - heavy-duty blades, enclosed drive line and rugged gearbox take shock loads and resist wear
- ADJUSTABLE DEPTH - on most models, standard front mounted gauge wheels allow choice of working depths
- NO MAINTENANCE - all gear construction eliminates chains, sprockets for maintenance-free operation
- CHOICE OF SIZES - for 12-200 h.p. tractors in 12 working widths from 30"-156"
- VERSATILE - perfect for landscaping, nurseries, commercial gardening, orchards, vineyards, crop residues and more.

Kuhn's Gyrotedder — not only does it save on drying time, it might just save your crop. Wet weather is less of a threat with Kuhn's Gyrotedder since its fluffing action speeds up hay's natural drying time.

The Gyrotedder's articulated frame offers maximum maneuverability. Wheel heights adjust without the use of tools, adapting rotor angle to crop density. And 3-point folding models are equipped with a Digidrive® multiple finger coupling that helps prevent machine damange

Check out Kuhn's Gyrotedder today! Eight models available in 10' to 28' widths.

NEW For 1994!

History Repeats Itself

"It's easy to improve on perfection when you start with the best."

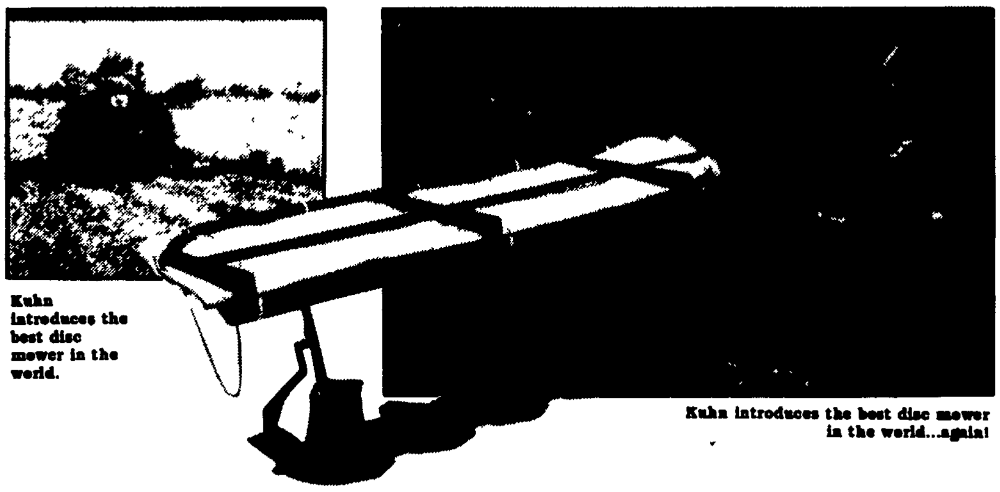
In 1968, when Kuhn introduced its first disc mower, the GMD 4, it started a revolution in the way grass was cut. It also started Kuhn on the road to over 25 years of unprecedented leadership in haymaking equipment.

Now history repeats itself with the introduction of the all new line of GMD "100 Series" Disc Mowers. Available in working widths of 6'7", 7'10" and 9'2". There's a Kuhn GMD Disc Mower that will fit your operation.

The heart of the new GMD "100 Series" is the newly designed cutter bar which makes for better overall performance, a more uniform cut and easier maintenance.

It's easy to improve on perfection when you start with the best, and that's just what Kuhn has done with the new GMD "100 Series" lineup. See your Kuhn dealer and order yours today. But don't delay, there's a limited supply of new GMD "100 Series" Disc Mowers and they'll sell fast.

1968 TODAY



Kuhn introduces the best disc mower in the world.

Kuhn's FC series Mower Conditioners-faster cutting, faster drying, better hay.

But what else would you expect from the recognized worldwide leader in mower conditioner technology? Kuhn applied over 160 years of research to build a mower conditioner that cuts quicker (7-9 mph, 6-7½ acres/hour) and requires less dry down than many other systems on the market. And Kuhn's FC series is easy on your crop. With a choice of finger comb or roller conditioning, you can match your crop type for even and gentle conditioning with less nutrient loss.

Kuhn's got just the right conditioner for you. Available in the following sizes:

- 6'7" 3-point model
- 8'2", 9'10" and 11'6" pull-type models

for the better.

Kuhn's Gyrorake turns haymaking upside down with the 3-in-1 rake, windrow inverter and tedder.

Windrow inversion is an essential process that not only allows hay to dry faster, but also decreases leaf loss as it increases nutrient levels. Get the job done fast with a Kuhn Gyrorake. It lets you match rotor and ground speeds to your crop conditions for gentle, efficient inverting.

The Kuhn GA series of single rotor rakes is available in working widths of 10'6" to 13'. And for really big operations, there's the GA 7301 Twin Gyro-rake with adjustable working widths from 21'4" to 24' for raking up to 17 acres per hour.

Poultry Pointers

antibacterial drugs, or antibiotics, are not effective in treating LT.

Antiviral drugs are not available for use in poultry. Management practices that optimize air quality yet still keep the birds warm may help decrease the severity of disease and promote recovery.

Can Chickens Be Vaccinated For LT?

Yes. In Pennsylvania, breeder and layer pullets are generally vaccinated for LT during the growing period, and vaccination is a very important means of control in these longer-lived flocks.

Broilers are generally not vaccinated unless the flock is at high risk because of a current outbreak of LT in the same geographic area or an LT-positive flock in the same house in the previous growout, etc.

Vaccines can be applied by various routes, including drinking water, spray, and eye drop. Vaccine types, schedules, and routes should be discussed with a poultry veterinarian or specialist so that use of vaccine can be tailored to the specific situation.

LT vaccine contains live virus that has been weakened or attenuated from field strains so that it will infect the birds, induce an immune response, but cause minimal or subclinical disease. However, there is strong evidence that vaccine virus, after cycling through a flock, may cause disease in other susceptible chickens, so vaccination procedures should be carried out very carefully.

The goal is to properly expose all birds in the flock, and only that flock, to a proper dose of the vaccine at the same time. Stringent biosecurity measures should be in place to prevent traffic from the flock for at least two weeks after vaccination.

Because a field outbreak of LT moves relatively slowly through a flock (when compared to some other respiratory diseases), vaccination in the face of an outbreak may help alter the course of the disease by lessening the severity. Again, consultation with a poultry health specialist is important.

A strong cooperative and coordinated industry effort is necessary during an outbreak involving more than one premise to decide on vaccination procedures and other containment strategies.

What Are Other Control Methods For LT?

Biosecurity is the best prevention and control.

Because LT virus can be shed and spread before there are clinical signs apparent in a flock, intensified efforts at biosecurity should be made in all flocks during winter months, especially when LT has been diagnosed in your area.

How Are LT-Positive Flocks Best Handled?

State regulations that go into effect at the time of quarantine will help define how the flock is handled, particularly if it is to be marketed soon.

Again, biosecurity procedures to prevent traffic (human or nonhuman) from a known LT-infected flock should be in place. If, for some reason, a visit must be made to an infected flock, the visitor should wear protective clothing at the farm and leave it at the farm. Under no circumstances should he visit another flock that day.

He should return home, shower, and wash clothing before going out the next day. The vehicle should be disinfected when leaving the premise and again before going to another poultry premise.

Equipment, feed, litter, and dead birds should not leave the farm. When the house is vacated, litter should be piled and covered, allowing it to head and decompose. All surfaces should be cleaned and disinfected and the house should be left empty for at least three weeks.

Because the LT virus is not very tolerant of heat, one cleanup strategy involves closing up the house and turning the brooders on for several days to heat up and dry out the house, thereby decreasing the LT virus population. Again, avoid moving contaminated litter, dead birds, or anything else from in or around the chicken house from the problem farm.

It may be appropriate to vaccinate the next flock(s) on the premise, depending on what control measures are in place industry-wide at the time.

In summary, now is the time to exercise extreme care in handling your chicken flocks to prevent the introduction of LT. Biosecurity measures that take into account the nature of the LT virus and the disease it causes are the best ways to protect yourself and fellow poultry producers from the introduction or spread of LT.

Being aware of the LT problem can make you part of the LT solution.

United Soybean Board Promotes Referendum Turnout

CHESTERFIELD, Mo. — The United Soybean Board, in a resolution passed recently at the quarterly board meeting in St. Louis, Mo., encouraged soybean producers "to make their voices heard withing the soybean industry and all of agriculture by exercising their right and responsibility to vote in the referendum on the natinal soybean checkoff to determine the future of the soybean industry."

Board chairman, Alan Puzey, said, "With full participation by soybean producers, we will accurately determine the future of the soybean industry."

Puzey, a farmer from Fairmount, Ill., said, "It is imperative that every eligible producer get out and vote, either by absentee ballot or on election day. It is our responsibility to determine the future of our industry for ourselves and our families."

The national checkoff, which began July 9, 1991, is dedicated to expanding the profitability of the soybean industry through domestic and international marketing, and production research.

The United Soybean Checkoff is run by 63 non-paid farmers nominated by their state and then appointed by the secretary of agriculture. The farmers are responsible for collecting and managing checkoff funds. As a result, 95 cents our of every dollar collected is spent on programs.

The referendum is managed by the United States Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service. Producers may vote by absentee ballot, available at their county extension office, or they may vote in person at their extension office in the county where they reside on February 9.

'Scooper Bowl' Festival To Benefit Children

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The second annual Farm Show "Scooper Bowl" offers everyone the perfect opportunity to enjoy a feast of ice cream and help Pennsylvania youngsters suffering from cancer.

The "Scooper Bowl," held Sunday, January 9, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., in the second level of the northeast building of the Pennsylvania Farm Show, will also feature guest appearances by area celebrities and Penn State's Nittany Lion.

The event is sponsored by Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners — the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid East UDIA/F.O. 36 Advertising and Promotion Agency, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program - and follows similar activities held in Boston, Massachusetts, and Syracuse, N.Y.

"Scooper Bowl" will feature a variety of frozen dairy products, including ice cream, frozen yogurt, and novelties. Visitors will pay one fee to enter the "Scooper Bowl" area and can then enjoy all of the ice cream they can eat. Proceeds from the event will benefit children with cancer and their families through the Four Diamonds Fund of the Hershey Medical Center.

The cost to enter the "Scooper Bowl" will be $3 for adults and $2 for children. Advance tickets will be sold on Saturday of the show for $2. Tickets are also available by contacting the Four Diamonds Fund at (717) 531-6086.

The Four Diamonds Fund raises approximately 99-percent of their funds from community organizations and events. Annually, the fund supports more than 350 children with cancer. The fund supports children and families by providing one hundred percent coverage of hospital bills not covered by family insurance. Additional monies from the fund are used to support programs at the Medical Center, including children's cancer research. The fund was created to provide families with support for the tremendous financial burden from hospitalization.

During the "Scooper Bowl," a special media ice cream contest will be held as well. Last year's participants selected their own recipes and flavors, from "Mint Chocolate Cow," to "Cranberry-Walnut." Participants this year will again create their own recipes and then hand-crank their recipes at 1 p.m., on January 9. A panel of judges from participating ice cream companies will select the winner. In addition, media personalities' flavors will be made by a professional ice cream manufacturer so "Scooper Bowl" participants can pick their own winners.

Central Pennsylvania ice cream companies will be donating their product and personnel for this event. Each company will have their own booth to unveil their unique ice cream products for sampling. Participating companies include Carvel, of Camp Hill; Hershey Creamery Company, of Harrisburg; Jack & Jill Ice Cream Company, of Bensalem; and Turkey Hill Dairy Inc., of Conestoga.

Pennsylvania's ice cream industry is the second largest in the country. The state's abundance of fresh cream and milk makes Pennsylvania an excellent location for ice cream manufacturing. Our citizens are also known as ice cream connoisseurs, and the "Scooper Bowl" offers the public another opportunity to sample some new products as well as old favorites.

Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners have been collectively promoting dairy products for the state's dairy farmers since 1989. Further information about the ice cream "Scooper Bowl" or the media ice cream making contest is available by calling (717) 787-6903.

Ukraine Students Visit DVC

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — The Institute of Management division of the Ivan Franko University of Lviv in the Ukraine sent 19 business students and two administrators to Delaware Valley College (DVC) in order to observe various aspects of the American free enterprise economy as it relates to agribusiness.

These visiting students were the second Ukrainian group to come to DVC. The first group visited the college in April 1993 in order to gain practical experience in understanding the American economy.

The Ukrainian Professional Society of Philadelphia contributed to sponsoring the delegation. In cooperation with DVC, the Ukrainians were given the opportunity to tour Pennfield Farms in Fredericksburg, so that they could see the long-term benefits of poultry science.

Dr. John Avery, chairman of the agribusiness department at DVC, had the opportunity to discuss the food and agricultural aspects of the American economy with the international students, whose economy is largely based on agriculture. "They were particularly interested in the business practices of American agriculture and how the free enterprise market relates to it," said Avery.

Wayne County Sponsors Bus To Farm Show

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — If you plan to attend the 1994 Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg, you may want to ride along with friends and neighbors. Wayne County Cooperative Extension is again sponsoring a bus trip to the Farm Show.

Topped the Penn State alfalfa germplasm trials at Landisville, PA in 1990 with a record yield of 9.28 tons per acre! That record still stands. The #1 yielder in '91 MD state test, back in the top again in '92. Plenty of additional data from Mid-Atlantic and Northeast tests in '91, '92, '93.

High stand scores show outstanding winter hardiness.

Study To Define Biotech Job Skills

MADISON, Wis. — The National FFA Foundation has been awarded a $456,780 grant by the United States Department of Education to partially fund a study entitled "Voluntary National Skills Standards for Competency in Agriscience/Biotechnology."

A collaborative effort by the education, industrial, and labor communities, the USDE grant represents less than half the funds needed to complete the project. The balance will be met through in-kind support from educators, government officials, and business leaders.

The initial 18-month study will determine the specific skills employees will need in agriscience/biotechnology occupations, and will study the major occupational categories in agriculture. The project's goal is to develop voluntary educationl standards in these fields which will lead to a better prepared workforce.

The focus of the study will be on occupations that require no more than a high school or two-year college diploma. The standards that result will be disseminated throughout the vocational-technical education community for use in curriculum design and program development.

According to Dr. Larry Case, chief executive officer, FFA Foundation, need for this agriscience/biotechnology study has been supported by agricultural educators, farmers, and agribusiness leaders who recognize the need to improve the quality of America's workforce.

"We will be needing increasing numbers of highly skilled employees in agriculture," said Case. "The agricultural industry, which currently employs more than 20 percent of the U.S. workforce, is growing more complex. New developments in agriscience/biotechnology offer tremendous potential for improving crop and animal production and bioprocessing, as well as for improving the quality of the environment. National skills standards will aid in assuring excellence in new and existing agricultural education programs and will be highly beneficial to future U.S. competitiveness."

The FFA grant is one of nine skills standards studies recently announced by USDE.

The project will be carried out by specialists in education, agriscience/biotechnology, communications, and evaluation. Validated results of the study will be introduced at national and regional education conferences, to be held in the fall, 1994.

Following the successful completion of this project, FFA will conduct a follow-up project aimed at helping schools and colleges meet the educational and performance standards identified in the initial study.

Chemsweep Program To Expand

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff recently named nine new counties to be served by Chemsweep, a disposal program that helps farmers get rid of unwanted pesticides.

The Chemsweep program permits farmers, Christmas tree growers, mushroom producers, nurserymen, greenhouse operators, fish hatchery managers, and others to get rid of canceled or outdated pesticides free of charge.

"Chemsweep gives growers a chance to protect humans and the environment without the costly bills that can come from disposal of even small amounts of hazardous materials," Wolff said.

"The collections are funded through registration fees paid by chemical manufacuters, so there is no cost to farmers or to taxpayers."

Wolff said the program is expanding to serve growers in Adams, Blair, Bucks, Bradford, Crawford, Indiana, Sullivan, Tioga, and Venango counties.

Farmers in the nine additional counties can obtain a pesticide disposal form from the Penn State Extension Service office in their county. Forms will be mailed to most farmers in late November from existing mailing lists and are available from the Department of Agriculture.

Chemsweep originated as a pilot program in six counties during November 1991. Seven counties were added to the program in 1992. More than 75,000 pounds of pesticides have been collected to date.

TRAFFIC ADVISORY

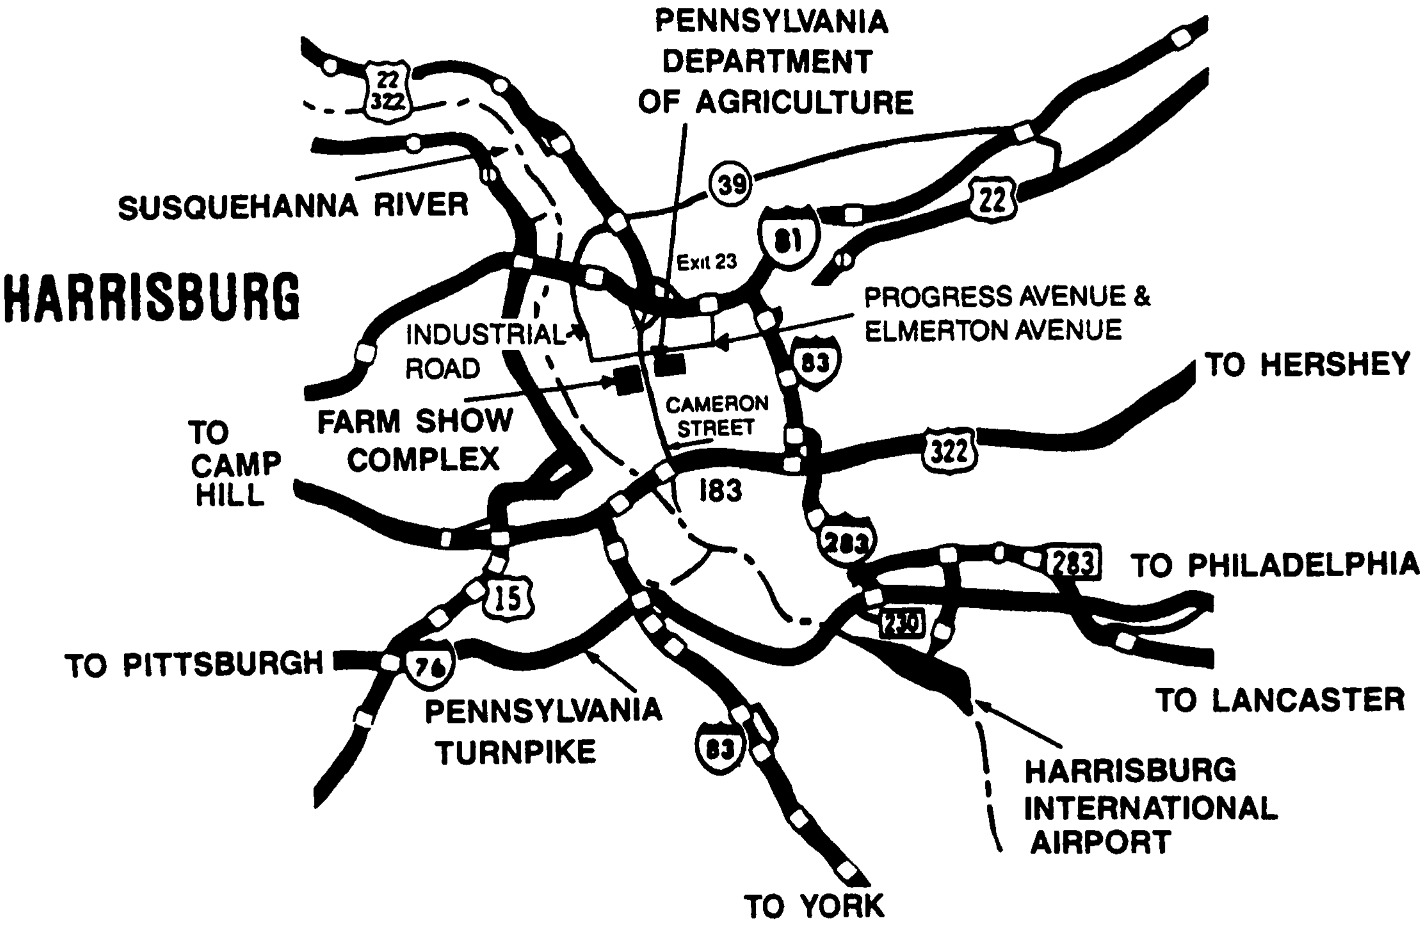
Last year the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation marked Harrisburg highways with alternate routes to the Farm Show Complex in an effort to alleviate major traffic congestion.

Message boards and Keystone signs will help Farm Show visitors along these recommended routes into the Farm Show and HACC parking lots.

- Traffic heading north on I-81 toward Harrisburg will be directed to get off at Exit 22 onto Front Street. Turn right onto Linglestown Road, right onto Industrial Road and follow that into the parking lots.
- Commuters travelling east on Route 22/322 will take the Rockville Exit, go south on Front Street, turn left on Linglestown Road and right onto Industrial Road. This leads to the parking lots.
- Traffic heading south on I-81 toward Harrisburg will take Exit 24, turn right onto Progress Avenue, turn right onto Elmerton Avenue and continue straight a few miles to the parking lots.

A rash of fatal accidents in construction zones around Harrisburg this year has officials doing everything in their power to make the roadways safer for motorists and workers alike. Most of the projects should be completed or suspended for the winter, except for an area on I-81 near Carlisle and a project on Routes 11-15 just above Harrisburg.

Motorists should also be advised that turning lanes have been reconstructed around the Farm Show Complex.



Hereford Breed Plots Course

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — "The greater portion of today's Hereford breed is already in the position to be the breed, and perhaps the only breed, to document that it spans the industry in terms of production efficiency and quality product," acccording to a statement of direction issued recently by the Hereford Directions Committee.

The Hereford Directions Committee, comprised of 11 representatives, was recently appointed to study the breed's strengths and weaknesses and to formulate a comprehensive blueprint for progress during the next decade.

One of the committee's directives, as outlined in the statement, is to "identify and eliminate the 'outlier' animals (those that are inferior or inadequate or extreme), for it is these outliers that are detrimental to breed image. Hereford breeders must commit to complete elimination of such animals and they must begin today."

Future selection decisions, according to the statement, should focus on enhancement of the end-product traits to meet the demand of a new consumer-driven beef industry.

Chairman of the committee was Roger Stuber, Bowman, N.D., current president of the National Cattlemen's Association (NCA). Hereford breeders on the committee included Bill Bennett, Connell, Wash.; Glynn Debter, Horton, Ala.; Keith Duncan, Joplin, Mont.; Lee Haygood, Canadian, Texas; Leon Langford, Texico, N.M.; Mark Largent, Kaycee, Wyo.; Vernon Rausch, Hoven, S.D.; and Gene Wiese, Manning, Iowa.

Bill Mies, Texas A&M University, and Gary Smith, Colorado State University, served as beef industry spokesmen with a broad range of expertise and experience.

Industry trends

To provide sound reasoning for long-range direction for the Hereford breed, the committee reviewed beef industry trends. The recent National Beef Quality Audit revealed inconsistencies in beef eating quality — one out of four steaks did not have acceptable palatability.

More than two decades of selection for maximums has resulted in costly tradeoffs that have compromised efficiency of production and consistency in beef quality.

At this time, 25 percent of boxed beef is marketed with a quarter-inch fat trim. Quarter-inch trimmed boxed beef will cause slaughter end points to be targeted at somewhere approaching .4 inches of backfat. NCA's Carcass Quality Task Force has recommended that packers may divide Yield Grade 2 and Yield Grade 3 to more closely identify red meat yield.

Taste has reclaimed the center stage. Continuing research identifies British breeds as the source of beef that is more tender and has a flavor advantage.

Just released, the Beef Industry Long-Range Plan calls for the cattle business to position itself to achieve efficiency and profitability while shifting from a production-driven to a market-driven industry. If the beef industry's number one priority is to improve the value of beef, in terms of tenderness and taste to the consumer, it follows that Hereford breed direction must address product superiority at the retail level.

Any selection or breed decisions that might compromise the eating quality of Hereford beef should be regarded as detrimental to the Hereford breed's long range plans.

Breed strengths

In terms of economic importance and recognition throughout the industry, reproductive efficiency is regarded as the Hereford breed's strongest asset. To maintain and continue this basic strength, the committee recommended that breeders closely monitor factors such as scrotal size, serving capacity, age of puberty, and calving intervals.

Taste, tenderness, consistency, and overall acceptability of Hereford beef was regarded as a major breed strength. Tenderness is a documented breed trait advantage and the Hereford breed ranks second among some 70 beef breeds for marbling. The investment in the Colorado State University Hereford study has enabled the Hereford breed to accurately document the merits of its end product.

The gentle disposition and behavior of Hereford cattle was considered an important breed strength. Disposition becomes an economic factor when labor costs are reduced, less working equipment is required, gains are increased, and losses from bruises are reduced. Behavior should be regarded as a breed bonus.

Mothering ability and adaptability to environment were considered strong breed assets. The Hereford breed falls in the optimum range for basic traits such as size, milk production and muscle. Such optimums allow Hereford cows to range over large areas for forage, raise a big calf under available range conditions, and rebreed on time.

Areas for improvement

A self examination by the directions committee resulted in recommendations for breed improvement in three general areas, listed in order of importance: 1) functionality/longevity; 2) carcass characteristics of muscling, marbling, tenderness and cutability; and 3) cowherd efficiency/feed conversion.

The committee ranked functional deficiencies at the top of the list as an area of required improvement. The incidence of cancer eye and susceptibility to pink eye were considered problems that required selection pressure. Selection for pigmentation, along with strong culling for incidence of cancer eye, were considered as solutions for eliminating the problem. Research has shown that cancer eye is highly heritable, therefore diligent selection and culling will be effective. Selection for recessed or "Hooded-Eyes" is another means of reducing predisposition to cancer eye.

Vaginal prolapse was another functional deficiency to be controlled through the process of culling individuals and offspring with a predisposition to this problem. Very strict attention to udder soundness was recommended by the committee. Big teats and weak udder attachment should not be tolerated by any Hereford breeder. In addition, selection for pigment on udders would be advantageous in areas where snow burn is a problem.

The committee came down hard on the need to eliminate animals with functional deficiencies, particularly cancer eye and prolapse problems. It was noted that while these functional problems existed in only a portion of the breed, these cattle were the cause for a general

78th Pennsylvania Farm Show
January 8-13, 1994
Farm Show Complex
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

Dear Friends of Agriculture:

I would like to extend this cordial invitation to you and your family to attend the 78th Pennsylvania State Farm Show in Harrisburg, January 8-13.

The Pennsylvania State Farm Show is the largest agricultural exposition under roof in North America. That fact is underscored with last year's opening of the North East Building, which added two acres of exhibit space. This long-awaited addition allowed us to create an exciting new area called the Family Corner, increase available space for livestock exhibitors and expand walkways.

Since it began in 1917, the Farm Show has hosted millions of visitors. It has become an opportunity for city folks to become acquainted with the people who work in food production. In addition to entertaining events such as the Rodeo, Sheep to Shawl Contest and Horse Pulling competition, visitors can enjoy the outstanding food provided by our commodity associations in the Food Court.

But the Farm Show has another purpose, one that is very important to the future of agriculture in Pennsylvania. It's the Commonwealth's primary event for showcasing the best in agricultural production.

The Farm Show has helped our farm community develop new markets and boost sales for livestock, crops and related products. In addition, the Farm Show helps establish new standards of quality for Pennsylvania agriculture that are the foundations of its international reputation.

We are proud of the efficiency and productivity of Pennsylvania farmers and agribusinesses who keep agriculture the number one industry of Pennsylvania. We invite you to explore the industry by visiting the 78th annual Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

Sincerely,

Boyd E. Wolff
Secretary of Agriculture

Earnings from the auction go directly to the young exhibitors, often enabling them to pursue careers in agriculture.

The Farm Show Scholarship Foundation will award its first six $1,000 scholarships during the 1994 Junior Livestock Sale to 4-H or FFA members selected by the scholarship committee. We invite you to come and support this year's sale!

MAIN FLOOR EXHIBITS - The doors of the Main Building will open at 9 a.m. and close each night at 8 p.m. The livestock barns will remain open until 9 p.m., and some of the shows in the Large Arena will actually last a bit later. The exception is Sunday night, when everything closes at 6 p.m.

MILKING PARLOR - Hundreds of cows are milked twice a day in a modern milking parlor in the North Building - a miniature version of the milk houses found on commercial dairy farms. This facility is unique among dairy shows because it is approved by State Milk Sanitarians for the production and sale of fluid milk.

NOVELTIES - T-shirts, sweatshirts, hats and toys with the Farm Show logo will be sold from several locations throughout the Complex. Your trip won't be complete without one of these.

PROGRAM SOUVENIR BOOK - The Official Program Souvenir Book is available for $2 at the main entrances of the Farm Show Complex. It also provides you with a valuable reference tool, featuring other information on Pennsylvania agriculture and the vital associations that make it our number one industry.

OLDER PENNSYLVANIANS RECEPTION CENTER - A reception center will be open on Monday, Agricultural Heritage Day, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Main Lobby along the south side of the complex for older visitors to relax and acquire pertinent information. Brochures on subjects like generic drugs, long term health care, and benefits and rights for older citizens will be available.

PENNSYLVANIA FOOD PANTRY - Through the cooperation of statewide agricultural organizations, the Pennsylvania Food Pantry will showcase an array of products produced and processed in Pennsylvania. Cooking demonstrations will be conducted several times a day in the West Lobby.

POULTRY DISPLAY - More than 2,000 bantams, geese, chickens and ducks are expected for judging prior to opening day. Over 400 champion birds will be displayed along the Lower Concourse throughout the week. You will also find the egg display in the poultry area.

RABBIT SHOW - Sanctioned by the American Rabbit Breeders Association, this one-day show will be held on Saturday morning. All best of breed, best of show, best of variety and all ten youth meat pen animals will be cooped and on exhibit for the entire week of Farm Show.

RECORD PREMIUMS OFFERED - The Pennsylvania State Farm Show is committed to exhibiting the best that Pennsylvania agriculture has to offer. This commitment to attracting top quality agricultural products and livestock is evidenced by another increase in premiums, which now brings the total purse offered to 1994 exhibitors to a record $205,393.

RODEO - Members of the Pennsylvania High School Rodeo Association will perform for afternoon and evening audiences in the Large Arena on Saturday. The student riders will compete for separate points in each sanctioned show, with classes in team roping, saddle and bareback riding, bull riding, steer wrestling, calf roping, breakaway roping, goat tying, pole bending and barrel racing.

SCOOPERBOWL SUNDAY - For a $3 contribution to the Four Diamonds Foundation, Sunday visitors can enter the Scooperbowl Arena and eat as much ice cream as they like. Five vendors will be serving their ice cream favorites between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. to raise money for children with cancer.

SHEEP TO SHAWL CONTEST - The 13th annual Sheep to Shawl Contest gets underway at 5 p.m. on Monday in the Small Arena. This popular event finds teams sheering sheep, spinning the wool into yarn, and creating beautiful shawls in just two hours. We invite you to stay until the judging is complete and bid on your favorite shawl during the 8 p.m. auction. All proceeds from the shawls go directly to the teams.

SUPREME CHAMPIONS - Selections of the prestigious 1994 Pennsylvania Farm Show Supreme Champions will be made for draft horses, swine, dairy cattle, beef cattle, sheep wool breeds and meat breeds after the last breed is judged in each department.

SWINE - Nearly 600 head of breeding gilts and junior market swine were competing for prize money last year. Pennsylvania swine producers are an important segment of our agricultural industry.

TRADE CONCOURSE - The new Trade Concourse will resemble a mini trade show when 16 Pennsylvania companies come together to display or promote their goods and services. We hope you are as impressed with the diversity of Pennsylvania agribusinesses as we are, as this cross section shows you. It's on the upper level of the Northeast Building.

Dairy Farmers Sponsor Activities At Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A life-size butter sculpture, an ice cream extravaganza, and a live commercial studio are just a few of the dairy industry's activities at the 1994 Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners representing the state's dairy farmers, will sponsor these events during the show.

For a fourth consecutive year, a large butter sculpture will greet visitors at the show's main entrance. The theme will be football and the sculpture will carry the theme "Tackle Your Thirst With Milk." Two players, A Penn State receiver and a University of Tennessee defensive back, will create the image of a big play reception. The entire theme was selected to commemorate the 101st anniversary of the first professional football game, held November 12, 1892, in Pittsburgh.

Eastern Milk Producers, from Syracuse, N.Y., will provide the butter for the sculpture. Raymond Mackintosh, from Ontario, Canada, will use nearly 800 pounds of butter to create the display. A video about the sculpture's development and theme will be a part of the display to give visitors further information. The entire display will be open throughout the show.

Ice cream lovers can devour all-they-can-eat at the second annual "Scooper Bowl," held Sunday, January 9. The feast of ice cream will begin at 11 a.m. and run till 5 p.m. Participants will be able to sample a variety of ice cream flavors all donated by Pennsylvania ice cream manufacturers. A special ice cream making contest between members of the local media will be held at 1 p.m.

"Scooper Bowl" visitors will also be helping a local charity. The Four Diamonds Fund, of the Hershey Medical Center, will receive all of the proceeds from the event. Four Diamonds provides funding for families that have children with cancer. Thousands of children have benefitted through the support of this program. Entry fees at the door will be $3 per person, $2 for children. Advance tickets will be available at the Farm Show Saturday, January 8, for $2 each.

In the dairy barn, Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partner's booth will feature a commercial studio for those who want to make it to the television screen. Teams can register to make a television commercial promoting fluid milk and dairy products. A prize will be awarded to the best commercial created during the Farm Show.

To preregister for filming, teams should contact Denise Spunar, at the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, (717) 283-2204. Props and related materials will be provided at the filming booth. All participants will receive a copy of their commercial on videotape. All creative will become the property of Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners.

The Dairy Promotion Partners include the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid-East UDIA/F.O. 36 Advertising and Promotion Agency, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

More details about the butter sculpture and "Scooper Bowl" are available by calling (717) 787-6903.

Sanner To ASCS Committee

Local administrative area (LAA) boundaries were set by the ASC committee in compliance with changes required by the Food Security Act of 1985. LAA's help provide farmers with effective farm program administration through local representation.

The delegates also elected Richard Kopicz and John Hix to one-year terms as first and second alternates to the county committee.

Hereford Breed

poor image for the breed in this highly visible area of production.

The committee urged action on two fronts. One, apply selection pressure in herd breeding programs to rid the breed of these deficiencies. And two, identify and discount in the marketplace those animals that exhibit functional problems or that descend from parents with such deficiencies. In simple terms, refuse to sell or buy seedstock which exhibited functional problems or trace to animals with functional deficiencies.

The second category of traits the committee felt needed selection pressure was carcass characteristics. Recognizing that genetic pressure for carcass traits may result in negative tradeoffs in production areas or consumer satisfaction, the committee was reluctant to recommend making quantum changes in carcass characteristics.

The third major area for improvement focused on cow herd efficiency and feed conversion. The committee recommended the Hereford breed place more emphasis on the female side of the genetic package to more directly address efficiency. Cows need to be more closely evaluated for condition score and their ability to retain body stores of fat. By selecting females that efficiently convert feed and grass into body condition, the Hereford breed will be producing the kind of cattle that will work for low-cost producers.

Herd goals

Addressing the task of making specific recommendations to Hereford breeders, the committee reviewed the breed's performance progress. During the last 15 years, the breed average for yearling weight has increased 160 pounds, weaning weight has increased 120 pounds, and birth weight has increased 10 pounds.

The committee emphasized its strong feelings that the Hereford Total Performance Records (TPR) program provided a valuable means for eliminating outliers, maintaining a balance of performance and keeping the breed in the industry mainstream. Realizing that Hereford breeders across the nation operate under a wide variety of climate and forage conditions, the committee encountered difficulty in making specific recommendations for every selection trait. The committee also acknowledged that customer preferences varied in different regions of the country.

A survey to each of the nine Hereford breeders on the committee was utilized to obtain their minimum and maximum recommendations in the most recognizable selection trait areas. The average of nine diverse programs may be construed as general Hereford industry recommendations and direction.

The committee underscored their concern of increasing birth weights and strongly urged Hereford breeders to maintain a close vigilance on their important economic trait. Feedback from commercial producers who buy Hereford bulls had a strong bearing on the committee's concern about heavy birth weights.

Selection pressure for growth performance has generally increased frame size in Hereford cattle. The committee urged breeders to keep frame score, or size, in proper balance to maintain efficiency and to mainstream the breed with respect to end product industry specifications.

Beef Council Plans Special Farm Show Display

Each January, thousands of consumers flock to Harrisburg for the annual Pennsylvania Farm Show. Again this year, the Pennsylvania Beef Council has planned a special display to remind the Farm Show visitors of the great taste of beef and veal.

At the Beef Council's traditional exhibit space in the beef cattle barn, Farm Show attendees can pick-up free beef and veal recipes. Tying-in with the Council's western theme display, a "country store" will offer beef t-shirts, aprons and cookbooks to the public.

The Beef Council is also coordinating the meat display in the Farm Show's Food Pantry exhibit area. Beef, veal, pork and lamb products processed in Pennsylvania will be displayed in a special meat case in the Food Pantry exhibit area. Additionally, chef and product demos will be conducted throughout the five-day event.

PBC Sponsors cattle industry development initiative

The Pennsylvania Beef Council is sponsoring a cattle industry development initiative which will examine the future of Pennsylvania's beef industry and make specific recommendations for long-term success.

Chaired by past PBC Chairman Ralph McGregor, a blue-ribbon committee of producers, packers, legislators, banking representatives, extension personnel and agricultural communicators has been selected to examine three prevailing questions: (1) What are the strengths and weaknesses of the present Pennsylvania cattle industries, and the constraints to further expansion and profitability?; (2) What specific types of enterprises (cattle-feeding, dairy-beef, cow/calf, etc.) should be encouraged considering the untapped resources available?; (3) What methods of communication and resource integration can enhance the size and/or effectiveness of Pennswylvania's cattle industry?

Using volutary packer contributions, the Beef Council sponsored an extensive survey of producers to learn of their thoughts relative to opportunities and constraints. The survey results will serve as a baseline for subsequent committee discussions.

Beef ad campaign captures awards

BEEF. IT'S WHAT'S FOR DINNER.

The beef industry's "Beef. It's What's For Dinner" advertising campaign has won seven honors based on creative excellence, advertising effectiveness and results. The awards were made by the American Marketing Association, Advertising Age magazine and other organizations.

According to recent consumer research, 80 percent of American consumers were aware of the beef advertising; the campaign has increased the number of persons who indicated they would purchase more beef.

Penn State Sports Network Carries Beef and Veal Advertisements

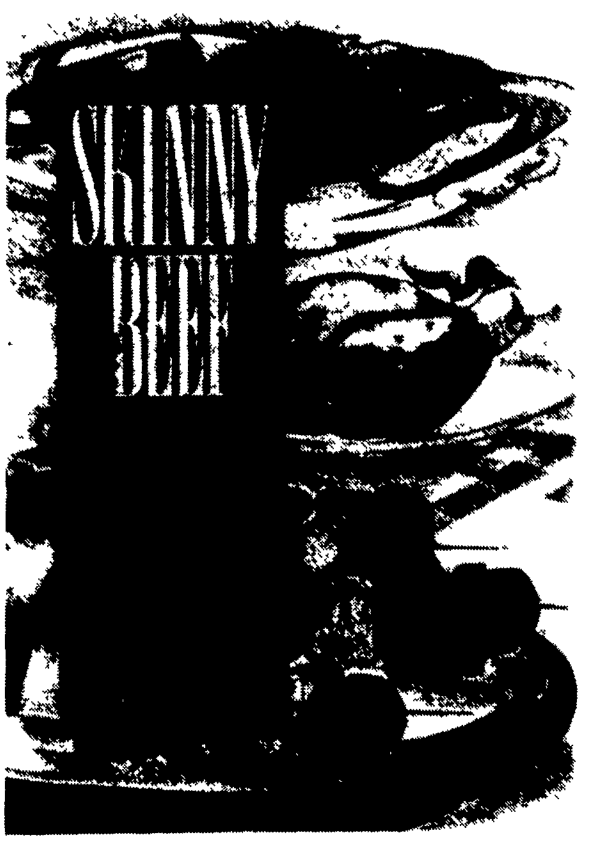
Capitalizing on Pennsylvania consumers' strong interest in sporting events, the Pennsylvania Beef Council has been airing beef and veal commercials on the Penn State Sports Network during football and basketball games.

The commercials have and will continue to be aired, on a local level, on more than 70 stations throughout Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The Pennsylvania Beef Council has extended the Penn State Sports promotion with a tailgate recipe brochure targeting sports fans who wish to score with the delicious taste of beef and veal. The brochure, entitled "Beef and Veal, Perfect Completions to any Tailgate Reception", contains 10 recipes, including Joe Paterno's own "Halftime Meatball Sandwich."

Additionally, a food editor release, highlighting beef and veal tailgating recipes was mailed to more than 150 newspapers across the Commonwealth. The release offered readers a free copy of the Beef Council's tailgate recipe brochure, and further extended the radio advertising message.

PennState



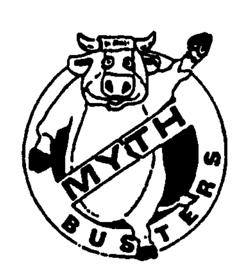
Skinny Beef, the industry's newest cookbook, contains more than 100 delicious recipes using beef. From quick main dish salads to family-style one-dish dinners, the booklet is a perfect gift for the beef lover. The book is available at a special price of $10 (includes taxes and shipping and handling) through the Pennsylvania Beef Council.

BEEF

Did you know

Beef exports in 1993 totaled almost 1.5 billion pounds (carcass weight), about 6.5% total of U.S. beef production. The PBC supports export programs through an annual membership in the U.S. Meat Export Federation.

"Myth Buster" training program helps prepare industry spokespersons



To assist in providing helpful hints when communicating to the media, the Pennsylvania Beef Council, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, cosponsored a media training program for beef industry enthusiasts.

In addition to participating in the two-day seminar, attendees were asked to become a "mythbuster" by conducting a number of proactive projects, including speaking engagements, media interviews and writing letters to the editor.

The MythBuster training program is part of an industry public relations program conducted by the Beef Council.

Farm Show Highlights Laurel Ridge Conservation Efforts

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania's Laurel Ridge attracts tourists from around the world to enjoy the area's hunting, fishing, hiking, skiing, and boating. The 330-square-mile area contains six state parks as well as the Seven Springs and Hidden Valley Ski resorts.

The ridge also provides potable water to a large section of southwestern Pennsylvania, and area residents are concerned about the effects of real estate development on the region's natural resources, particularly its high-quality groundwater. They are seeking ways to better assess the potential impacts of new construction and other development activities.

Penn State scientists are helping local officials gather this information and develop the tools needed for resource management decisions. Their efforts will be highlighted at the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences exhibit at the 78th Pennsylvania State Farm Show, in the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, Jan. 8-13.

Researchers in the college are developing a computerized geopraphic information system (GIS) that will enable users to quickly access and analyze information about Laurel Ridge soils, water, land use and other characteristics. The system initially will be used in water supply and well-head protection planning.

"A GIS makes it easier to examine the many interrelated factors affecting natural resource management," said Dr. Rick Day, director of Penn State's Land Analysis Lab. "Layers of geopraphically referenced maps, with associated statistics and data, are stacked in a computer's memory to perform complex assessments of a region's natural resources."

The Laurel Ridge GIS will include data layers detailing features such as the region's soils, topography, geology, land use, water, oil and gas wells, timber and coal resources, and water quality research information. "Planners, citizens and others will be able to use the GIS to recombine data layers to more effectively predict the environmental impacts of current and future development," Day said.

"Maps displaying different information — for example, watersheds, wells, water and sewer lines, soils and topography — can be superimposed on the GIS's computer screen to show how various factors might combine to affect the region."

Eventually the system will allow local planners to identify areas with available groundwater resources and to simulate the impact of proposed well sites and other projects.

"The ability to simulate the impact of proposed changes in land use will help avoid environmental damage and legal conflicts," Day said. "The system also will be used to help identify and protect sensitive groundwater recharge areas from contamination."

At the Penn State exhibit at the Farm Show, visitors can see for themselves how a GIS works. A computer demonatration will show how easily the system can layer different types of information, while educational exhibits will detail the scope and goals of the project.

At the end of the project, the GIS will be transferred to and maintained by local officials in the Laurel Ridge area. Day and other Penn State GIS experts will train future users of the system in workshops held at the Penn State and in the Laurel Ridge area.

The 1994 Farm Show will open to the public on Saturday, Jan. 8, and will close on Thursday, Jan. 13. Hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday; and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday. Parking is $2 and admission is free.

Cheese Carving Salutes Dairy Industry

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The dairy barn is the place to be at the 1994 Pennsylvania Farm Show. Visitors can make their own dairy television commercial and win prizes. They can also observe one of the world's greatest wonders, a cheese carving saluting Pennsylvania's dairy industry.

Creative spirits can pre register to make a dairy commercial at the Farm Show. The winner will receive a special prize — the actual airing of their commercial on a Pennsylvania television station.

Pre-registration for the commercial schedule can be made by calling Denise Spunar, at the American Dairy Association, (717) 283-2204. People will also be able to register at the dairy booth throughout the week of Farm Show, January 8 to 13, 1994. Commercials will be taped from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily except Sunday. On Sunday, commercials can be taped from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Special props including dairy product cartons will be available at the dairy booth for filming. A special studio is being created to provide a "dairy" background for the commercials. All participants will receive a videotape copy of their performance and Farm Show visitors will actually see the commercials live in the dairy barn.

Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid East UDIA/F.O. 36 Advertising and Promotion Agency and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program are sponsoring the booth's activities. In addition to the commercial studio, the Partners' booth will be the site of the first Farm Show cheese carving. The display will be created by Richard Alford, from Akron, Ohio, and will offer a tribute to the state's dairy industry. Approximately 40 pounds of cheese will be used to build the display.

T-shirts will also be offered for sale at the dairy booth, located in the north building of the Farm Show Complex. The shirts will carry the theme "Some of My Best Frends Are Cows!" with a variety of neon colors highlighting a colorful display of cows. Shirts will be available in both children and adult sizes.

Rubber cow erasers, a traditional Farm Show offering, will also be available at the booth. Sales will be from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, except Sunday, when the booth will be open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

More information about the Dairy Promotion Partner's booth is available by calling (717) 787-6903.

New Swine Formulation Registered For Feed Use

RAHWAY, N.J. — Merck AgVet Division announced the approval by FDA of Ivomec® (ivermectin) Premix for Swine, a new product that will provide pork producers with the first in-feed formulation for controlling both internal and external parasites in growing pigs.

New Ivomec Premix for Swine is formulated as a 0.6 percent concentration (Type A Medicated Article) and is labeled for the in-feed control of a broad spectrum of internal parasites, including five species of adult worms and four species of immature worms. Ivomec Premix also kills two major external swine parasites — sucking lice and sarcoptic mange mites.

"This new approval will be a major convenience to hog producers," said Dr. Edward A. Boraski, senior director of U.S. Technical Services for Merck, "because it's the first feed additive registered to control both internal and external parasites of swine. The in-feed control of external parasites will eliminate the need for a separate mange treatment."

"Ivomec Premix is mixed at a standard inclusion rate of 1.8 grams per ton of complete feed," said Del Birkhofer, associate product manager at Merck. "The standard inclusion rate eliminates the need to calculate a special mixing formula for different weight groups of hogs. It'll take a lot of work and worry out of controlling parasites in hogs."

The new registration permits feeding Ivomec Premix for swine to growing pigs up to 220 pounds with only a five-day withdrawal period. Merck expects the new product to be available in early 1994.

'Dairy Derby' Comes To Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Knowledge about milk products and the dairy industry could win you cash and U.S. Savings Bonds at this year's Pennsylvania Farm Show, as the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) presents the "Dairy Derby."

Starting on Sunday afternoon, at booth 348, show-goers can watch, and possibly participate in, a Hollywood-style game show.

The purpose of the exhibit is to educate consumers. "Dairy Derby" game show contestants will be asked questions on a variety of dairy-related topics from cow's to cottage cheese. Contestants won't have to be agricultural experts, but knowledge about the dairy industry could be profitable.

The "Dairy Derby" will have two parts. First, four contestants will appear on stage and compete against each other as they answer dairy related questions. Each question will be worth 10 points. The first person to win 50 points will be declared the winner, and will move onto the exciting cash cube.

"The cube is basically an oversized phone booth with a big blower in it," said "Dairy Derby" game show host Bill Snitcher, MAMMA's marketing director.

"Inside the cube will be several hundred dollars in cash, plus certificates for approximately $1,600 per day in U.S. Savings Bonds. Once the blower is turned on, the contestant will have a short amount of time to catch what they can, and slip it out of the cube through a small slot. What they are able to get out of the cube is theirs to keep. The trick is to catch the cash or bonds, because inside the cube, it's like standing in the middle of a tornado."

The "Dairy Derby" will be played for approximately 40 minutes out of each hour, starting at 10 a.m. (except Sunday) and ending at 6 p.m. MAMMA estimates that eight to 10 games will be played each hour to allow as many people to participate as possible.

Garden Display At Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension and Landis Valley Museum, Lancaster, welcome you to visit with a Penn State Master Gardener at the Farm Show Exhibit "Heirlooms and Hybrids: Together in Today's Garden" from January 8 to the 13.

The horticulture exhibit on the second floor of the Northeast Building (next to the large arena) replicates a 19th century potting shed and old-fashioned raised garden bed. The garden includes both heirloom flowers, herbs, and vegetables.

Heirloom such as Dr. Martin's lima beans and Deacon Dan Beets were handed down through Pennsylvania German families and planted to preserve the variety. Hybrids such as All-American selections including Buttercrunch lettuce, fernleaf dill, and Nicki-mix nicotiana have old-fashioned appeal produced from today's commercial-hybridizers.

Master Gardeners from seven counties will be participating including York, Adams, Franklin, Cumberland, Lebanon, Lancaster, and Dauphin. Master Gardeners are available to answer your winter gardening questions. The exhibit will show old gardening tools including an old mole trap, old fashion seed display, heirloom containers and plenty of spring planting ideas. In all, 13 heirlooms and 13 hybrids will be growing in the display.

If you're unable to attend the Farm Show but would like written information on heirlooms and hybrids, contact Sara at the extension office at (717) 757-9657 or at Landis Valley Museum at (717) 569-0401. POURED SOLID CONCRETE STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS

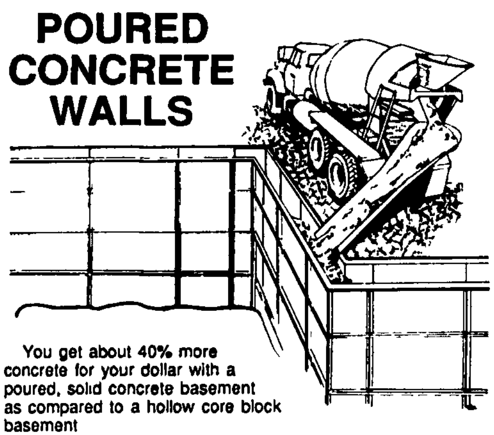
START WITH THE BEST!

POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic .. there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

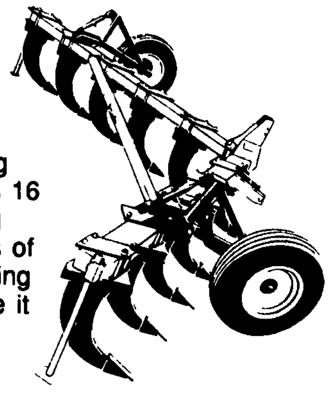
SUB-SOILERS



The husky, curved shanks of the Sub-Soiler dig down as deep as 16 inches, shattering compacted layers of plow sole and lifting the hardpan while it is being broken. 3, 5, 7 shanks.

X-FOLD PULVERIZERS

19 Ft. to 46 Ft.

The X-Fold pulverizers are designed to meet the needs of today's larger acreage farmers... and Brillion offers them in two models and 11 sizes from 19' through 46'. Now available with 20" Ductile Rollers.

BRH & BHFF RO-CROP CULTIVATORS

Minimum Tillage

The heart of the BRH Ro-Crop is Brillion's No-Wobble Parallel Linkage. Heavy duty is an understatement, the linkage for each gang weighs over 50 pounds. Strength where it's needed, a Brillion tradition.

Heavy duty straight edge shanks allow high-speed tillage without throwing dirt or residue.

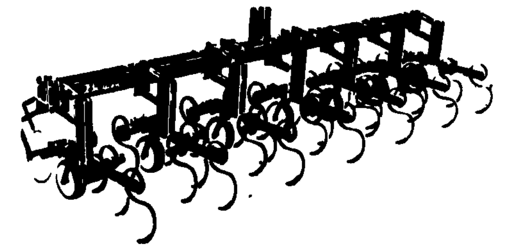
BRS RO-CROP CULTIVATORS

4-6-8 Rows



The Brillion "S" tine cultivator (model BRS) with four-way tooth movement is designed for high speed cultivation, especially in conjunction with chemical weed control. The "S" tines also mulch the soil and level the ground for easier harvesting.

FLAT FOLD CULTIVATORS

6-8-12 Rows

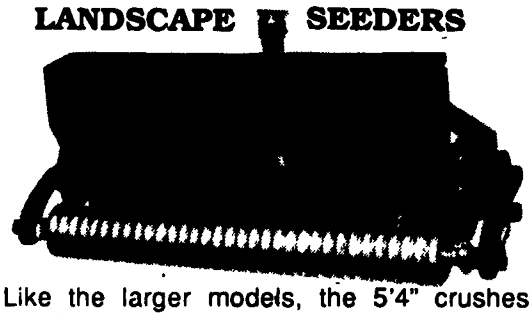
BRS or BHFF flat fold cultivators. Base machine includes 5"x7"x¼ folding tool bar on 640 or 830 sizes and 3/8" on center sections on 840 and 1230 sizes with hitch for category II or III.

AG SURE STAND SEEDERS

SS8, SS10 & SS12 SEEDERS

For years Brillion Grass Seeders have proven to be the best machine for planting grasses and legumes... and now they're even better! Larger, heavier boxes, high seeding rates, nylon lined seed meter, new drive system and more. 5 ft., 8 ft, 10 ft., 12 ft., 3-point or pull type.

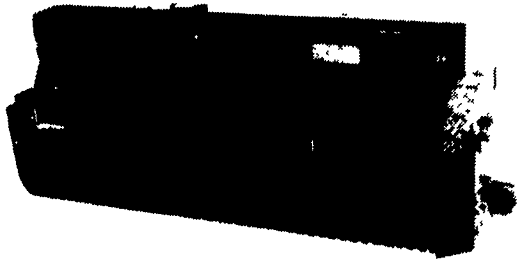
LANDSCAPE SEEDERS



Like the larger models, the 5'4" crushes, seeds and rolls in one operation, tucking seeds in the top ½ " of the soil...in a firmed clod-free seedbed that gives thick, even stands at greatly reduced seeding costs. The shallower seeding depth is just right for controlled moisture and growth conditions.

TURF MAKER SEEDERS

3 Pt. In 8 Ft., 10 Ft., 12 Ft.



This Brillion specialty seeder utilizes the same world famous seeding method made popular by the "Sure-Stand" agricultural model grass seeder. Variations in seedbox capacity and seed metering mechanisms make these the ideal seeder for special requirements of professional landscapers, turf and sod raisers. Available in 3 point or pull type.

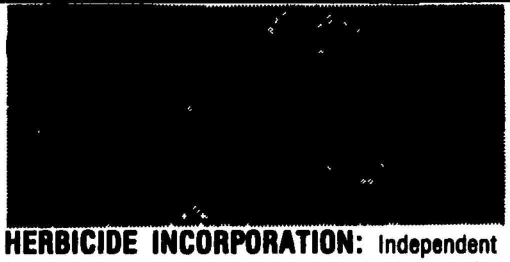
TINE
HARROW

Original "Spreading Action"® tines give better coverage at much higher speeds. Adjusts without tools to provide the right penetration for a big variety of jobs!

PASTURES: Increases quality and quantity of feed from pastures. Aerates to stimulate growth and improve moisture penetration. Scatters droppings, reducing parasites. Prepares soil for overseeding without disturbing existing growth. Works in seed and fertilizer. Many owners report pasture yield increases of 15%.



HERBICIDE INCORPORATION: Independent research using black light photography proves the Fuerst Harrow behind your disk or cultivator gives you "near perfect" incorporation in one pass--better than implements costing several times more! Shreds trash as it prepares & levels seedbeds.

BROADCASTING SMALL GRAINS AND GRASSES: University of Illinois found overseeding by broadcasting followed by a Fuerst Harrow a superior combination, out-performing equipment costing more than 10 times as much. Pulled behind the broadcaster, it covers seed to desired depth in one time-saving operation.

SHREDS STALKS: Shreds and spreads stalks in spring ahead of no-till and ridge-till planting.

4 to 42 ft. widths. Flexes to cover every inch at 6-8 mph. No maintenance. Easy to use and store. Insist on the original "Spreading Action"® tines.

NAVIGATOR II

STRESS-FREE ROW CROP GUIDANCE

- Unique design keeps the implement parallel with the rows even when the tractor moves laterally as it drifts off course. Most other systems oversteer the toolbar which adds damaging side pressure to the stabilizing coulters.
- Automatically compensates for sidehill drift.
- Eliminates excessive pull and stress on hydraulic components associated with other guidance systems.
- Very few moving parts provide smooth, friction-free lateral movement.
- Works effectively on all conventional and ridge-till cultivators, planters and 4-wheel drive articulated tractors.
